GEM GIRL IS AGAIN ARRESTED

Vere Bowing, the pretty young woman of mystery who is facing trial on the charge of stealing diamond pendants valued at $535 from Shreve, Crump & Low, upon representation that she was one of Governor Foss's twin daughters, was arrested at the Court House to-day charged with stealing a diamond ring valued at $1,050 from the Rock Bay State of Bigelow & Kennard.

In this case the police charge that the dashing young woman took the ring from a tray while she was making selections of other rings to be sent on approval to Commonwealth avenue. She also is said to have represented herself to be Miss Dorothy Forbes, a former president of the Vincent Club and daughter of J. Murray Forbes of No. 2 Commonwealth avenue. In the meanwhile she engaged a taxicab in conversation about her great friendship for Miss Florence Sears, the well-known society girl athlete.

On a Hunt for Bail.

The young woman was arraigned before Judge Duff later in the day under the name of Dorothy Forbes, that being the one under which the alleged theft was committed. She was represented by Edward T. McGettrick. Bail was placed at $2,000 for a hearing next Tuesday. While on her arrest in the previous case a well dressed middle-aged man gave cash bail of $500, the young woman had difficulty to-day in finding the surety who would be given in custody of a matron, while attempts were made to arrange for her release.

The young woman wore a shirt of dark material and a brown silk skirt waist, with a black bow tie, and made a striking picture in court, her hat was a tiny white felt one of the Pierrot type.

The young woman and her lawyer visited the court house to-day on matters connected with the previous case and as they were passing through the corridor inspectors Pierce and Conboy approached them. The police had been seeking her since her first appearance in court and served the new warrant on her. The hearing will be held to have taken place on June 1, two weeks before Shreve, Crump & Low say they were similarly victimized. The young woman has been living at the Hotel Lenox and her first arrest was at her apartments there.

Puzzle to Detectives.

The mystery of the girl's career is still much of a puzzle to the detectives. The complaint brought in by Shreve, Crump & Low charges that she went into their store on June 14, introduced herself as a daughter of Governor Foss and asked to see some pendants. She is alleged as having $5,000 worth of jewelry sent to the State House "on approval" and getting away with two pendants in the process.

The young woman went to the store in an auto and was dressed richly, but in good taste. She carried the services of a maid, and it was through this maid and a gown shop where some of the pendants was pledged for a loan of $75 that she was traced to Maine and back to Boston, where she was finally arrested. She was taken on a secret indictment warrant.

FRENCHES DISOWN ELOPERS

NEW YORK, Aug. 17—Hope of the "Jack" Geraghtys for a reconciliation with the family of the bride, following the sensational elopement of the society girl and the chauffeur, vanished into thin air to-day when Amos Tuck French, father of Mrs. Geraghty, announced that so far as the French family is concerned the matter is ended.

"Is it true that the French family has decided to forgive Mrs. Geraghty?" Mr. French was asked at his summer home in Tuxedo.

"The matter has been dropped," was the reply. "So far as we are concerned it is closed indeed. That is all they is to it."

He was told of the report that Mrs. Elsie French Vanderbilt, his sister, planned to come to New York to meet her mother. Mrs. Frances Ormond French, upon her arrival from abroad.

The bride was Mrs. Vanderbilt's favorite niece and it was said that the former wife of the millionaire would try to persuade her mother to arrange a reconciliation.

"That report is untrue," declared Mr. French. "There is nothing to it. Mrs. Vanderbilt will not go to New York."

Mrs. Vanderbilt is a guest of her brother at Tuxedo.

Strong Friend at Court.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, sister of Amos Tuck French and favorite aunt of the bride, it has been said, is proving a powerful "friend at court" for Mrs. Geraghty, the elopING bride of the Newport chauffeur. Remembering the agony of her own marital unhappiness, "Aunt Elsie," as the bride calls her, has beheld in sorrow the estrangement between Julia French Geraghty and her family and the efforts of the parents to break off the love match.

Mrs. Vanderbilt is clever and persuasive. She hurried from Newport to Tuxedo Park yesterday, where she is said to have met the opposition of the bride's parents with strong arguments. She has pointed out how much better it is for the family to be united and to get rest from publicity by forgiving the bride. She has convinced the parents that the only forgiveness the bride will accept must include her husband too.

Another cause for the expected speculation is the conduct of "Jack" Geraghty himself. He has shown that he loves the bride devotedly. He has talked to the newspapers, it is true, but only in sheer

Mrs. Julia French Geraghty's Own Life Story

"Happy Jack" Geraghty's eloping bride will tell readers of the AMERICAN the wonderful romance of her life.

The first chapter will be published in to-morrow's AMERICAN, and there will be another every day until she has finished her fervent, vivid love story.

It is a new story, delving far into her young life, telling of her youthful ambitions to escape the dull routine of society. It reads like a tale of the Mediaeval Ages. It is a case of a modern Lochinvar who stole a society bride, not by horse power, but in a speeding auto, in the midnight darkness.

If you don't get the AMERICAN you will miss one of the most remarkable stories ever published in Boston, one that outstrips in interest and action the best sellers of fiction.

Julia French Geraghty herself tells how she, a pampered pet of the Newport Four Hundred, the niece of Elsie French Vanderbilt, studied for three years to be prepared to marry the poor Newport boy of her choice.

Of equal interest to all young women, especially, Mrs. Geraghty is going to tell them why she would rather be a poor workingman's wife than shine in the light of so-called exclusive society.

DON'T MISS THE AMERICAN TO-MORROW.

Geraghty Highball The Latest Drink

The latest in Newport is the "Geraghty highball."

A stranger called for one at "Dick" Bishop's. The barkeep said: "Help!"

"Oh, that's easy," said the stranger. "A Geraghty highball, you know, is simply some French brandy and Irish whiskey."

ATWOOD FLIES TO SANDUSKY

SANDUSKY, O., Aug. 17—Harry N. Atwood, the Boston aviator, landed at Venice at 11:27 o'clock, after a remarkable flight from Toledo, in which he made the rapid flight of fifty-seven miles at a speed of sixty miles an hour. Venice is a suburb of Sandusky.

He said he would not bring his machine into the city, but would remain on the field at Venice until this afternoon and then resume his flight toward Cleveland, the stopping place for the night.

Thousands of persons greeted the birdman when he alighted and boosted him on their shoulders. Atwood, so far, has made 607 miles on his trip between St. Louis and New York and Boston.

Atwood came here at noon from Venice in an automobile to have luncheon.

The distance from Toledo to Cleveland by the air route is 107 miles, one of the shortest legs of the trip.

Atwood was up at dawn, tuning up his machine. The weather was ideal, with a light lake breeze blowing. A large crowd gathered to witness the start, and cheered the young aviator when he made his appearance. Atwood said before starting that he would fly direct to Sandusky, forty seven miles distant, making the first stop of the day there, unless something unforseen interfered. He was scheduled to reach Euclid Beach, Cleveland, the end of the day's journey at 4 p. m. The aviator was a little disgruntled at losing $500 prize money through a mistake of one of his managers, F. C. Milliken, who has since left town. Atwood's contract called for his landing at the fair grounds, but through an error Atwood came down at Bayview. The aviator immediately severed his connection from Milliken.

Atwood was 745 miles from New York and 1,015 miles from Boston as he started his day's journey. He had completed 521 miles between St. Louis and Toledo, although the aviator said that he had covered probably 100 more than this in flights over St. Louis and Chicago, which were not counted.

The young aviator began the fourth lap of his flight by heading across Lake Erie, proceeding by 30,000 people as he arose. rose in the air gracefully as a bird and after half circling the field Atwood pointed the nose of his craft towards Sandusky. Though Atwood rose in the air at 10:21 his official starting time was 10:35.

DECISION IN COPPER SUIT IS AFFIRMED

Judge Dodge in the United States District Court handed down a decision to-day in which he affirmed the decision of Referee Ghleed in the Bankruptcy Court confirming the sale of the National Mining Exploration Company to the Iron Copper Company for $50,000. The National Mining Exploration Company is located next to the Arizona Commercial Copper Company, controlled by Nathan L. Amster. The National filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy. Its stock had sold at near $1, but declined to a few cents a share.

BEATEN BY BANDITS.

CHICAGO, Aug. 17.—Three masked bandits held up the Fifty-Second avenue station of the Oak Park elevated railroad early to-day and, beating the agent into unconsciousness, escaped with $120. The agent, William H. Scott, probably is fatally injured.

JAPANESE HERO IS ILL IN BOSTON

Admiral Togo, the Japanese admiral who is touring this country as a guest of the nation, is ill at the Hotel Touraine with acute indigestion.

All plans for his entertainment in Boston to-day were called off. Plans for to-morrow are doubtful.

The silent Japanese warrior, who sank the Russian armada, is a very slim man, but he has overtaxed his system trying to keep up with the fierce pace of American hospitality. He went too far, and nature, conqueror of all warriors, rebelled.

Admiral Togo arrived from New York late last night exhausted. The first pains of indigestion set in soon after he got to his room in the imperial suite at the Touraine. The attack became acute.

The American officials detailed to accompany the distinguished guest wished to call in an American physician. But Admiral Togo would have none of them. He called for his medical kit, the same one he carried through the Russian war, which he takes everywhere he goes. It is stocked with Japanese remedies, the use of which he thoroughly understands.

Diagnoses His Own Illness.

Diagnosing his own illness and administering his own remedies, the doughty General struggled with little success, with his illness through the night. He did not get a wink of sleep, worn out though he was.

This morning he was better, but was weak from the wrenching pains he had undergone.

It was impossible for him to keep his engagements for to-day. Announcement was made at 8:30 that the Admiral was ill and that all to-day's plans for his entertainment would have to be cancelled.

At 10 o'clock it was announced that the Japanese medicines had done their work and that Admiral Togo was asleep. This was the first slumber that had come to him since yesterday morning.

News of Admiral Togo's illness caused alarm and deep sympathy.

The state and city officials, who had planned to entertain him to-day, sent inquiries to the Touraine or called in person. Mayor Fitzgerald and Acting Governor Frothingham were most solicitous. Naval officials at Charlestown Navy Yard and with the North Atlantic fleet at Provincetown rushed inquiries for details.

After giving out assurances that the admiral's condition was not critical, the officials of his Japanese suite hastened to reassure the Japanese embassy at Washington, which had taken alarm at the first telegraphed bulletin that the national hero was stricken.

The following telegraph was despatched to the Japanese embassy by Commander

FITZGERALD READS SERVICES ON LINER

As there was no Roman Catholic clergyman aboard the Cunard liner Franconia on her last voyage to Boston, Mayor Fitzgerald conducted a religious service for members of his faith. Saloon passengers went to the second cabin, where, before about 100 persons, he read the Litany of the Blessed Virgin and the morning prayers, while the congregation responded. Mayor Fitzgerald said to-day: "As priests rarely take services with them when traveling and it would be impossible for one to conduct mass without them, I am going to raise a collection among my friends to provide one, so that clergymen in the future will not be hampered in offering up the sacrifice of the mass on shipboard."

CUSTOM MAN SEIZE GOULD KIN'S GEMS

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—Personal effects valued at $565, were seized by customs inspectors from Mrs. William A. Hamilton, a society woman who is a cousin of Mrs. George Gould, upon her arrival from Europe, because the customs men said she had failed to declare the articles, including a gold mesh bag bought in Paris, a gold cigarette case, lace waists, chins, etc.

TIRE INJURES SIX.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 17.—Six persons were hurt in an auto accident at Ridgeway early to-day. A tire burst and the car plunged over a precipice.

AUTO KILLS MAN IN SOMERVILLE

Harrison P. Hale, a Boston Elevated conductor, was killed and his car-mate Edward McCluskey was injured to-day when the conductor, after stepped the car of which he was in charge, chased the boy who was stealing a ride, in front of a swiftly moving auto truck, at the junction of Washington and Prospect streets, Somerville.

Hale was in charge of an inward bound Spring Hill car. The boy landed on the car to steal a ride. The conductor signalled the motorman and the car was stopped. The boy was standing on the step of the rear vestibule of the car, which was a closed box car of the old type. The conductor, after the car was stopped, ran around the end, and the boy hopping off was struck a glancing blow by the auto truck. The conductor, failing to see the truck, stepped squarely in front of it.

The truck was driven by Herman C. Keen of No. 388 Main street, Charlestown. Patrolman McCabe and Keen lifted the mangled form of Hale on the truck, which was quickly driven to the Somerville Hospital. He was dead when he reached the hospital.

Keen was arrested pending an investigation. He will be arraigned on a manslaughter charge. The boy was taken to the hospital in an ambulance.

Hale was thirty years old and lived at No. 24 Arthur street, Somerville.

MYSTERY IN DEATH OF 14-YEAR-OLD GIRL

BARRE, Vt., Aug. 17—A posse which has been searching for fourteen-year-old Katherine Hurst, who disappeared from her home yesterday, following a quarrel with her mother, found the body of the girl to-day in the bed of Stone Hill. It is thought she had been dead several hours. Whether she committed suicide or fell off the bank is not known.

'PHONE GIRL IS A SUICIDE

Disappointment in a love affair led to the suicide to-day in North Attleboro of Mary Mahoney, a former telephone operator at the Crawford House in Boston, with relatives in Dorchester. She had been in North Attleboro for about three months living with friends.

To-day she rushed out of her room into an adjoining room and there dropped on the floor unconscious. She died in ten minutes. Medical Examiner Holden of Attleboro returned a verdict of suicide.

POLITICS FATAL TO DR. SULLIVAN

Dr. James Sullivan of Manchester, N. H. is dead at the Carney Hospital. His death is attributed to the strain of his campaign for the nomination of Manchester last year. He was the most prominent man in that city and was Democratic candidate against Edward C. Smith. The result of the ballot was disputed and the Republican Aldermen gave the seat to Smith, but the case is still in court.

Dr. Sullivan was a native of Mt. Vernon, N. H., where he was born in 1855. He was a graduate of the Yale Medical School, practiced thirty five years in Manchester, and was wealthy. He served in the city government, the legislature and republican conventions. Twice he was a delegate to the Democratic national convention. He was chairman of the Board of United States Pension Examiners.

POPE IS AGAIN CONFINED TO BED

ROME, Aug. 17. Pope Pius X. had to return to his bed to-day after having been allowed to leave it to look over his voluminous correspondence. The pontiff shows no sign of regaining his normal strength and his faltering steps made it apparent that he has aged a great deal during the past few days. Many of the messages of sympathy received at the Vatican were read to him by his physicians, but he exclaimed, when more than a score from America were given to him:

GERMAN HEAT WAVE OVER.

4 HURT IN TREMONT ST. CRASH

Four persons were seriously hurt when an automobile ran wild down Beacon street hill, dashed across Tremont street and down School street toward Washington just before noon to-day.

The injured are

Mrs. Jeane J. Martin, thirty-two years old, wife of Dr. D. J. Martin of the Homeopathic Hospital, injuries to head and left leg; taken to Homeopathic Hospital.

Harris L. Bick, twenty-one, of No. 1 Rowdoin street, Brighton, injuries to hip and back and probable internal injuries.

Ralph E. Daniell, twenty-one, of No. 18 Lincoln street, Portsmouth, N. H., injuries to back.

Patrick Flood, seventy-three years old, of No. 712 Commonwealth avenue. Badly shaken up and bruised and suffering from shock due to age. Taken to Relief Hospital.

The runaway auto belonged to Victor Stetson, a contractor of No. 29 Bayard street, Allston. He said:

"I was coming down Beacon street hill. My little boy, living, six years old, was in the rear seat. I tried to slow up to get out of the way of a team. My power gave out in front of St. James's church. I got out and started to crank my machine. It started. I slung to the dash board, and the machine tore through the Tremont street crowd. I know there were people knocked down and hurt. The machine was stopped near the School street entrance to the Parker House.

The injured people were carried to the Court square police station and later sent to the hospitals. Captain Sullivan of the station says he will have the facts of the accident investigated and a charge of reckless driving entered against the owner of the car.

WOOL WORKERS WORK OVERTIME

LAWRENCE, Aug. 17.—The first encouraging news about New England mills which have been shut down in consequence of the Underwood tariff bill was dispatched from this city to-day, where word comes to the Arlington mill crew that pay for the 61 hour week November 26, 1910. What is still more encouraging is that they are now working overtime. This is taken as an indication that orders for woolen goods are coming in.

The cotton and woolen industries in New England have been greatly depressed ever since the panic in 1907. It is said that the lack of demand for clothing shows more than anything else how the American people have been economizing in household expenditures. 164 garments have been made to stand longer wear among the industrial classes, who furnish a great part of the wool and cotton markets.

COST OF LIVING AGAIN MAKES JUMP

Boston is again in the midst of increasing prices throughout the meat and provision markets, beef having advanced four cents in the past two weeks, with milk, butter and eggs showing also a decided rise. The present conditions are nearly the same as over a year ago, when high prices induced a widespread agitation and an investigation was instituted. Summer prices now in the height of their season, use large quantities of the best cuts, which creates a big demand and high prices for them. Besides this the market is somewhat short. Pork and bacon are as high as ever before. It is not higher, and ramp steak is marked up to forty cents per pound. Lamb appears to be the most reasonable.

A Massachusetts City Is Facing a Big Graft Exposure

When the story is all told there will be a bigger sensation than was caused by the recent upheaval in Lawrence. Investigations conducted by interested people, unsuspected by officials concerned, more than back up the recent charges that the State's money is being worse than wasted. You'll be amazed by the story in Sunday's AMERICAN

COMMERCE MEN SAIL FOR HOME

CHERBOURG, France, Aug. 17.—Most of the delegation of the Boston Chamber of Commerce who have been touring Europe sailed for New York on the steamer Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse. A number decided to stay behind for further study of municipal conditions abroad.

The party expressed themselves as very much pleased with the hospitality they have met with everywhere and hoped they would be able some time to entertain a similar body of men from Europe.

The leaders of the party said they believed their work in the interest of the forthcoming international convention of Chambers of Commerce would not with great favor.

Fred J. Melsane, special correspondent of the AMERICAN, is writing vivid articles about what the Chamber of Commerce party is seeing abroad. Read his article in next sunday's AMERICAN.

Plans South Pole Dash in Novel Monoplane.

LONDON, Londonderry Watkins, who is to accompany Sir Douglas Mawson's expedition to south polar regions, has had a monoplane specially built for him. The machine will be packed up in an engine and shipped it to Australia. The monoplane is the only which has been constructed with a view to its being packed up in an emergency. Its frame is made of steel tubes, and it carries a multiplicity of propellers, one being placed behind each of the six planes. This kind of motor was used by Monk, Gilbert in the circuit of Europe, and remained unchanged throughout the flight. The machine is 45 feet wide by 30 feet long.

Croker to See Daughter.

LONDON.—Richard Croker will soon see his daughter Ethel for the first time since she has grown to womanhood. Mrs. Ordell, who is now in London, said she will sail for New York Saturday in charge of her New York home. This accomplished, Mrs. Croker will return to Paris to make her home with her two daughters. During Mrs. Croker's absence in New York, Ethel, accompanied by her brother, will visit Richard Croker in Ireland.

Home Rule for Scotland

LONDON.—Sir Henry James, Bulwell, member of Parliament for Kirkcaldy, Scotland, interested in the House of Commons, is sensitive for the establishment of home rule in Scotland. The demand is based upon the complaint that the affairs of Scotland under the present administrative means do not get justice. Sir Henry Dalziel is termed a Liberal, but holds advanced views on all political and social questions.

LONDON.—W. Bowers Bourn of San Francisco has purchased Lord Ardilaun's fine estate, Muckross, Killarney. Mr. Bourn's daughter, Maud, married Arthur H. Vincent, a resident of County Clare, and his couple will take up their residence at Muckross, which has been frequently mentioned as a possible royal residence in Ireland.

Stanley Rhodes Dies.

LONDON.—Stanley Rhodes, a nephew of Cecil Rhodes, is dead as the result of injuries which he received in an automobile accident. Mrs. Rhodes, formerly Mabel Rhodes, a family living in Kent, was thrown from the motor car, was not so badly hurt as was at first thought.

BIG DORCHESTER TENEMENT FIRE

Fire in the tenement house district along Stanwood street, Dorchester, caused great excitement today, and the firemen had hard work to keep the flames from spreading to twelve of the inflammable "three deckers" on one side of the street, because of the wind.

The fire started on the second floor of No. 53 Stanwood street, in the apartment of Mrs. Morris J. Green. She was alone in the house with her young child and Leo. She saw the flames in the rear of the apartment and rushing into the burning kitchen, picked up her child and took him to the street. The fire spread to the house adjoining at No. 55, and this house was badly scorched.

The damage in both houses is about $5,000, of which more than $4,000 is on the house at No. 53.

There was the greatest excitement among the people living in the block. There are twelve three-story houses on the same side of Stanwood street, Nos. 55 and 53. Many people began moving their furniture and clothing into the street.

The house at No. 55 is owned by Charles T. Bentzgen, chef at the Hotel Touraine, who is now in Italy on a visit with his family. On the top floor live Samuel Goldsmith, his wife and family. They were all at Revere Beach.

The house at No. 53 is owned and occupied on the first floor by Edward Essary; on the second floor lives Anton Berg, and on the third floor lives Mrs. A. M. Keeting. The fire is supposed to have been started by carelessness with matches.

The circulation of the AMERICAN is 300,000 more than its next highest competitor and 400,000 more than all the other evening papers of Boston combined.

WILSON TOLD ALL BY WILEY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—Dr. Harvey W. Wiley continued his defence today before the House committee investigating the Department of Agriculture and the Wiley-McCabe controversy. He reiterated his statements that the work of the bureau of chemistry has been hampered by the food and drug inspection board, which abandoned prosecution in a number of cases opposed by Wiley.

"Did you furnish us a list of those cases?" asked Representative Sloan.

"I certainly will," said Dr. Wiley. "The board dropped prosecutions in many cases similar to those in which convictions were obtained."

Wiley insisted that Secretary Wilson was not at all responsible for the employment of Dr. H. H. Rusby, about which so much controversy arose and that the secretary knew very detail of the appointment.

Dr. Wiley said he had personally carried the facts about the Rusby appointment to Secretary Wilson and stated the case fully. The secretary, he added, also was personally informed about the proposed method of getting Rusby.

Dr. Wiley brought in a schedule of his correspondence with Rusby. It did not include the famous letter of January 23, 1911—the one which H. H. Rusby known was never mailed to him, but which was read by the personnel board as the basis of its charges against Wiley and Rusby.

NUMIDIAN BROKE DOWN, ARRIVES LATE

The Allen liner Numidian from Glasgow, which was due to arrive last Monday, and at Charlestown today, shortly after 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon a cylinder head blew out and had to be towed in by the revenue cutter Gresham.

On Monday afternoon the engine had been so repaired as to be able to attain 10 knots an hour.

Capt. H. M. Brondigant of the U. S. revenue cutter service, who was on board, said:

"The engine room looked like a wreck after the cylinder head blew out and nearly everyone on board thought that it would have to drift and some vessel sighted us.

On board were 102 young women of the south and middle West who were returning from a trip through Europe. They were winners of newspaper contests and had been in Europe several months.

REMOVING HER SKIN

(From the Feminine World.)

The quickest and surest way to make a good complexion out of a bad one is to actually remove the thin veil of faded or discolored outer skin from the face, this can be done easily, safely and privately by any woman. The process is one of gentle absorption.

Get an ounce of pure mercolized wax from your druggist and apply it at night like cold cream, washing it off in the morning. In a few days the mercolide in the wax will have absorbed the disfiguring cuticle, revealing the fresh young skin underneath; you will have a beautiful, clear, natural complexion. The process is pleasant and harmless, making the face look brilliantly attractive and youthful. It also effectually removes such blemishes as freckles, tan, muddy patches, liver spots, pimples, etc. Every woman should keep a little mercolized wax on hand, as this simple, old-fashioned remedy is the best complexion beautifier and preserver known.

BOY RISKS LIFE TO SAVE SISTER

Frances Frazier, the thirteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Frazier of Charles River Heights, Dedham, to-day risked death from drowning, while rescuing his two-year-old sister, Elizabeth, from the river. The tot, though unable to swim, plunged in and dragged the baby out, unconscious. Dr. John W. Pratt revived the little girl.

The boy and the girl were out in a boat on the Charles in the rear of their home, Elizabeth, the baby girl, was sitting on a box, and some movement of the boat toppled her into the water. The boy, entangled in eel grass, had some difficulty in extricating back into the boat.

He rowed the motionless child to the shore. His mother, hearing his shouts, had run down, and then seized the boat and ran with it to Bridge street, nearby.

GIRL ACCUSED IN BEATTIE CASE ILL

"The Other Woman" in Virginia Murder Case May Be Suffering From Typhoid Fever.

RICHMOND, Va., August 17.—The fight to save Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., from death in the electric chair will turn dramatically and sensationally next week to Chesterfield county courthouse, when his counsel, two of the most astute lawyers in the state, will present evidence to break down the alibi of Paul Beattie, cousin of the accused man.

Paul Beattie is the most important witness for the prosecution. If his testimony that he bought the gun with which Henry is alleged to have killed his beautiful young wife stands the acid test, Henry Beattie will surely go to the chair.

The plan of the defence is to disprove Paul Beattie's alibi, bring witnesses to show that he was not at home and in bed at the time of the murder and thus present to the jury this question: "If Paul Beattie as he swears, bought the shot gun with which the murder was done and it is proved that he lied about being at home at the time the crime was committed, why is it not just as plausible that he killed Mrs. Beattie?"

Try to Break Down Alibi.

It is a big defence, for the first doubt in favor of the accused man will be raised, and, in circumstantial cases, a jury is unusually cautious. Certain it is that in Virginia no jury will be found to bring in a verdict of guilty when there is no actual witness to the crime and if the most important evidence against the accused is given by a man who is shown to have lied to the jury.

Paul Beattie is a weak young man. He is handsome, but his weakness shows in his eyes and in the soft lines that play about the corners of his lips as he talks or laughs. He is also an epileptic, and epilepsy is often a sign of weak mentality. It may come about that the accusing cousin of Henry Beattie will find himself in turn accused of the crime by the legal defenders of Henry Beattie. The fact is already established that Paul Beattie bought the weapon with which Mrs. Henry Beattie was slain. The prosecution has not yet found a witness who saw Paul Beattie deliver the shotgun to Henry Beattie."

PEN DESCRIPTION OF THE PRINCIPAL BEATTIE WITNESS

"Paul Beattie is a weak young man. He is handsome, but his weakness shows in his eyes and in the soft lines that play about the corners of his lips as he talks or laughs. He is also an epileptic, and epilepsy is often a sign of weak mentality. It may come about that the accusing cousin of Henry Beattie will find himself in turn accused of the crime by the legal defenders of Henry Beattie. This is already established that Paul Beattie bought the weapon with which Mrs. Henry Beattie was slain. The prosecution has not yet found a witness who saw Paul Beattie deliver the shotgun to Henry Beattie."

Paul Beattie, Other Principal Witness, Also Ill, and the Trial May Be Delayed.

Beattie's statement that he did give the gun to his cousin. It is significant that Paul Beattie is still a prisoner, although he is not accused of any crime and that Beulah Binford is also a prisoner.

In a moment of delirium following an epileptic attack in his cell Paul Beattie screamed at the top of his voice that he would not take 'any money." When he became normal he gave no explanation of what that cry meant.

Cried He Wouldn't Take Money.

The defense is asking if he received any money, who gave it to him and why was it given? Did Beulah Binford play any part in this matter? The defence will ask these questions and the Beattie murder case will become a mystery as the trial proceeds—a mystery ever deepening instead of clearing as the fate of Henry Beattie is given the jury.

Friendless, in jail, with no relation of her own, with no one to turn to, afraid for her at any time, Beulah Binford presents a picture of neglect. In the county jail at Chesterfield Courthouse there are only menagre comforts. Actuated by a desire to help her companion for her, the Salvation Army to-day called at the jail and offered the services of one of their women in the local corps for the girl.

The State has already engaged fifty-four witnesses in the Beattie case. Just how many the defence will have is not known, but there will be at least a score.

Score to Testify in Defence.

Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., still declines to discuss the case with any one save his father, brother and counsel, and they are repeating nothing he says. Sheriff Kemp of Hourico County, however, declared the jail where the man is confined, says Beattie is "the most contented prisoner he has ever seen."

Following the announcement that Harry A. Smith, counsel for the defence, had secured a number of witnesses to break down the alibi of Paul Beattie, the chief witness against Beattie, from the latter's trial for the murder of his wife, came to-day the announcement from the Henrico County jail that Paul Beattie was ill and that Beulah Binford was also ill.

Both main witnesses for the prosecution are thus put in the position of being cases for the delay of the trial.

The prosecution has had nothing to do with this new turn in the affair. The defence is not ready for trial, and knowledge achieved by counsel for the defence, that Paul Beattie's alibi would be weakened by three new witnesses may have put the prosecution in the position of asking further delay. It is a safe thing that with Beulah Binford ill in bed the case will be delayed.

Beulah Binford Ill.

She will be given a careful examination and a better knowledge of her condition will be obtained by the physicians representing the prosecution. Beulah was taken seriously ill of fever. Dr. Palmer Bridgt was immediately summoned. Whether the girl is suffering from typhoid fever has not yet been determined. Her illness is attributed in part to the ordeal she underwent Monday at the Chesterfield court house.

GIRL ELOPER TO MARRY AT HOME

The rounds of true love run so rough for Miss Florence Belcher and Eugene Marcatt that instead of their being able to reach the altar she was arraigned before Judge Avery in the Quincy District Court today on the complaint of Frank L. Forest Belcher of Plymouth street, Holbrook, that she is a retractory child. She is seventeen years old, the father had a warrant issued when Miss Belcher left her home in Farmington, N. H., with Marcatt, who is twenty-seven, on August 8. Mr. and Mrs. Belcher had no objection to the young man as a son-in-law but thought the girl too young to wed.

The engaged couple met four months ago in the Rice & Hutchins' shoe factory in South Braintree, where both worked. Marcatt called on the girl at her home often, but when a change was announced in her parents said "nuit!"

When Marcatt went in an effort to work in the Farmington, N. H., shoe factory, which he thought he might get, he found his finance could not bear to part and she went with him. They stopped at Dover to get married, but the city clerk told them they could not get a license for five days. They went to Farmington, N. H., to their home in the same city, always lived in the same street, but on a different block. At the end of five days the Dover city clerk wrote the girl that he had received that the license application gave her age as seventeen and she was therefore a ward of parents' consent.

Then Clerk of Police Frank Matthews of Farmington took the girl into custody in a police court and she was brought home. Marcatt, faithful and true, came with her.

In court Mr. Belcher said he no longer objected to the marriage, but thought he wanted his daughter married at home. He said Marcatt is a good substitute for young man.

Judge Avery continued the case until November 14. It is expected that the wedding will be held shortly after that, as soon as Miss Belcher can buy a trousseau.

WALKER TALKS OF COERCION

Julian R. Dillsby, secretary to Speaker Walker, candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor, and one of his chief campaign managers, is responsible for a statement saying that several members of the Legislature who have been working in Walker's interests have made the charge that they have been threatened by members of the Republican State Committee with defeat unless they stopped working for Walker. The statement says:

"One member of the House from Essex County told a representative of Speaker Walker that he had been threatened with defeat because of his advocacy of the Walker cause. He says: 'I took one of Mr. Walker's nomination papers down to my district and got a number of signers on it before turning it over to the man who had agreed to circulate it. The next morning one of the strong men of my district told me he understood I was circulating a Walker paper; that he had heard the matter discussed at the headquarters of the Republican State Committee and that it meant defeat for me if I took any further part in the Walker campaign. This man is a very good friend of mine and he warned me further that I had a hard fight on my hands and could easily be defeated.

"The member quoted did not wish his name used. He comes from a district in the centre of the Gardner-Lodge sphere of influence."

BOY BADLY BURNED BY CHARGED METAL

Touching the weight on an electric light pole heavily charged with electricity, Joseph Dunn, the six-year-old son of John Dunn, of No. 114 Adams street, Malden, was badly burned about the hands and right foot, at Adams and West streets, that city. John McDonough, eight years old, of the same address, rushed to his aid and was thrown several feet by the shock.

BLISS W. DARRAH, HUNTED FUGITIVE, AND SLAIN WIFE

All vessels departing from Boston are being watched in the hope of capturing Bliss W. Darrah, charged with stabbing his wife to death at Bedford Tuesday night. He had been a fugitive since, and it is believed he will seek some vessel sailing from this port.

Dr. Henry J. Walcott, medical examiner of Concord, performed an autopsy on the body of the murdered woman and found that the knife had pierced one of her lungs, causing internal hemorrhage from which she died.

It is believed that Darrah came upon his wife unaware, as she sat on the doorstep peeling apples which the children had gathered. Her son, William, who was in a nearby field, heard his mother's screams, and saw his father running away, the police claim.

WHITE FIRST TO GET NAME IN

The first complete set of nomination papers for a candidate for Governor was filed to-day at the Secretary of State's office for Representative White, a candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination. There is a total of 2,117 signatures on the papers, of which 1,339 have already been certified. This insures Mr. White's name a place on the ballot.

Robert Luce, candidate for the Republican nomination for Lieutenant-Governor and Secretary of State Albert P. Langtry, candidate for the Democratic nomination to succeed himself, are the only other two candidates for a place on the State ticket who have filed complete papers.

The time for the filing of nomination papers closes Aug. 29.

It was announced from the Secretary of State's office to-day that of the papers now on file, approximately ten per cent. have been found to contain errors which would have prevented the candidate's name from going on the ballot had the errors not been discovered early.

Following the filing of Mr. White's nomination papers, Xavier said that the papers represented on Mr. White's papers constituted only a fraction of the latter's support. "Forty thousand voters throughout the State have already endorsed Mr. White's candidacy for Governor, and he has no fear of the outcome of his campaign, either for the nomination or for election later," he said.

NEWPORT CHILDREN AT "INDIAN PARTY"

NEWPORT, Aug. 17.—Children of the 400 enjoyed an "Indian party" on the grounds of the Perkins estate on Bellevue avenue, it being given by Mrs. Charles D. Hillhouse and watched by society celebrities, who seemed to take great delight in the "war dance." The children came to the grounds in the charge of nurses and maids, and were all dressed in cowgirls or wild Indians. After Wild West sports the children had a lunch, and they all went home happy and tired. Among the children in the part were Willie Vanderbilt, son of Mrs. Elsie French Vanderbilt, the aunt of sleeping Stanley Yerkes; Dorothy little Kathleen Vanderbilt, the daughter of Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt; the Misses Allen children, the Clarence Dolan children, the S. Lathrop Ames children, Frederick Sheffield's children; the Craig Biddle children, the Robert Goelet children and the William Woodward children.

ADMIRAL TOGO STRICKEN IN BOSTON

Plans for Entertainment of Japanese War Hero Given Up.

Shuzo Takaki, one of the principal members of the suite.

Admiral Togo's illness is not serious. Do not be alarmed over reports."

(Signed) TAKAKI

No Physician Called.

To the Boston reporters Commander Takaki said that no physician had been called in and that, in all likelihood, none would be.

What Admiral Togo needs, he continued, "is a complete rest from his program and from the excitement he has been undergoing ever since he arrived in his private America."

The commander said he hoped the patient would be able, when he awakened later in the day, to go on a carriage drive.

When the illness was announced it was said decidedly that the admiral was unable to call at City Hall, the State House and Charlestown Navy Yard, as he had planned, or to go to Provincetown to inspect the battleship fleet. This much of the day's schedule was abandoned on the spot.

It was hoped at first, however, that he would be able to attend the complimentary banquet which was to be given in his honor at the Algonquin Club at 8 o'clock tonight by Rear Admiral Francis T. Bowles, U. S. N., retired. But at 11 o'clock it was decided that this banquet would have to be given up, as Admiral Togo was still confined. Rear Admiral Bowles, who was waiting in the corridor for hours in the most patient fashion, finally called off the banquet plans. Several hundred guests who had been invited, were notified where the meal ought be.

Meanwhile hundreds of people had assembled at various vantage points around the city to see the expected parade. They were clustered in front of the Parkman Tower, corner of Park street and Tremont and Beacon street by the State House. Many went over to Charlestown Navy Yard, where the Admiral was expected at 10 o'clock.

State, city and naval officials who were to be residents of the Japanese hero, were notified by telephone, telegraph and wireless, the latter to the Providence, when the day's schedule was all off.

Admiral Togo's every move is most closely watched by the newspapers. Hence the startling public announcement that he was ill. Many extras were issued with the story, and in a remarkably short time practically the whole city knew that the guest of the nation was ill.

The Governor's office at 10 o'clock received an official notification from Private Secretary Takagi that Admiral Togo expected to be able to make his third postponed visit to the State House, and Third Assistant Secretary of State Chandler Hale planned to be at the State House later to make arrangements.

The news of the Admiral's indisposition was received at about 8 o'clock, but it was at first supposed that the visit would come without him, and Lieutenant Governor Frothingham, Mayor Fitzgerald, Blake and Lieutenant Henry P. Crowley of the Governor's military staff waited till 10 o'clock with that expectation. A crowd of 200 people gathered on the steps today and remained till about 10 in the hope of seeing the hero of Japan.

Though the illness of the Japanese visitor came as a great shock to the public and to the State and city officials who had planned to entertain him here, it was not by much of a surprise to the American officials who have been traveling with him since he arrived in Quebec a week ago today.

Captain Potts, U. S. N., noticed that on the trip over from New York last night Admiral Togo was pale, even for a man of his swarthy complexion.

"But did not mention it to Admiral Togo," said Captain Potts, "lest I might hurt his feelings."

The Togo party has had warning, too, of the severe tax to which all its members have been subjected. In New York two United States naval attaches succumbed to the strain of entertainment and travel-ing. They were seized with acute indigestion, just like Admiral Togo was today. They had to leave the party.

Traveling Tired Him.

The whole cause of the illness of the Japanese guest may be summed up in six words. Too much traveling; too many banquets.

Admiral Togo is the incarnation of formal courtesy. He has tried to live up to the over-elaborate program mapped out for him by his American hosts. He has gone through long banquets with a smile on his face when he was tired out. He has been bundled from pillar to post, to see this and to inspect that. Nature has finally resented.

At 8 o'clock to-day, when a throng of over 1,000 people clustered about the Touraine, the public was waiting for the nation's guest to come out. No word was given of his illness and the crowd was puzzled at the delay. Finally the newspapers arrived and it became known that the Admiral was ill. There was much sympathy expressed as the public slowly went away.

At City Hall, where Admiral Togo was expected at 9 o'clock, another crowd had assembled.

Crowd Wait in Vain.

While the crowd on the outside and the officials on the inside were waiting the following message was received by Dick Flood, assistant secretary of Mayor Fitzgerald:

Admiral Togo has an attack of indigestion and he will be confined to his room in the hotel for the rest of the day. He regrets that he will be unable to keep the engagement at City Hall.

(Signed) CHANDLER HALE.

A detail of police, which had been sent to the hall to keep the lines clear, was dismissed. One of the police announced that the expected guest was ill and the crowd gradually dispersed.

The following address message was sent to the battleship Nebraska, which is lying off Provincetown:

Admiral Togo is ill. Sudden attack of acute indigestion. Will not be able to visit fleet as he had hoped. Will send you a personal message later today.

Captain T. C. Potts, U. S. N., represents the United States Navy and is a member of the Togo party, having come over with him from New York, made this statement:

"Admiral Togo is suffering from an attack of acute indigestion. He will undoubtedly remain in his room all day to-day. I have just sent a telegram to Admiral Osterhaus notifying him that the Admiral will not inspect the fleet at Provincetown to-day. I also notified the navy yard and the Governor's office and Mayor's office.

Caused by Banquets.

"I believe his illness was brought on by the number of banquets the admiral attended in New York and to the fact that he has been very busy ever since his arrival here. I have no idea as to what his future plans will be. It all depends on how quickly the recovers from this attack. Physicians have not been called in as yet, but they may be called in any hour.

"The illness of Admiral Togo upsets an elaborate schedule for his entertainment today. After breakfast at 8 a. m. he was to have paid a formal visit to City Hall and the State House. Mayor Fitzgerald was to give him official welcome at City Hall, having had his party arrive here from Lenox with a view to being here for this purpose. At the State House the civic honors were to be done by Lieutenant Governor Frothingham in the absence of Governor Foss.

At 10 o'clock the Japanese commander was to be received at Charlestown Navy Yard with the high naval honors due his rank. At 10:20 he was scheduled to leave aboard the United States torpedo boat destroyer Monaghan for Provincetown.

Plans Are Disarranged.

Provincetown looked for its arrival about noon time. His visit there was to be one of the premier events in the latter's calendar. He was to take luncheon with Rear Admiral Hugo Osterhaus aboard the Nebraska at 1 p. m. and to start back for Boston at 4 o'clock.

At 8 o'clock this evening there was to be an elaborate banquet in his honor at the Algonquin Club, tendered by Rear Admiral Francis T. Bowles, U. S. N., retired.

Admiral Togo's private car was attached to the train which left New York last evening at 5:30. At the stops along the route little gatherings of Japanese and Americans thronged about the observation end of the car at the rear of the train, applauding the admiral. He was eating a hearty dinner at New London, Ct., when the cheering became loud that sort of appreciation and curiosity he went to the rear end of the car, acknowledging the good will manifested by the crowd.

When the train pulled into Providence it was boarded by an AMERICAN reporter. Admiral Togo was told that Providence was the birthplace of Commodore Perry, the first American officer to enter a Japanese harbor.

Reads the American.

He said: "I am very interested and pleased to be in the birthplace of your great officer, Commodore Perry."

The admiral was then handed a copy of the AMERICAN. Seating himself on one of the camp-stools on the observation platform, he raised the paper to a position suitable for reading, so that his face was hidden by the newspaper and glanced over the paper on the front page.

On the way to Boston from Providence the admiral chatted with Commander Yamaguchi and Mr. Hale, saying he was glad that he would soon be in Boston, although he stood well the journey from New York.

Notwithstanding the admiral's custom to give but one interview in each city visited, and he was not inclined to talk much, there are his views on questions put to him, expressed by Commander Yamaguchi, his personal aide:

"How have you stood the journey from New York?"

"Well."

"Will you be glad to see Boston, as the 'cradle of liberty' in America?"

"Very pleased."

"With what feelings do you anticipate seeing the American fleet at Provincetown?

"I look forward with pleasure to my visit to Boston, especially as I am to make the trip from there to Provincetown to see the American fleet."

"What do you think of American women?"

The admiral begs to be excused from answering that question.

Admiral Togo had nothing to say in regard to the so-called "war scare" in Japan and thinks that opinions as to the value of battleships to naval warfare are premature.

He has never seen a baseball game or an American prize fight. He is a moderate, occasionally smokes a cigar or cigarette.

A great crowd swarmed around the admiral's private car in the Boston & Albany station in the South Station. Over a hundred Japanese were present and their many-throated shouts of "Banzai" added to those of the Americans, swelled into a deafening roar. The flare of a flashlight gave an added thrill and allowed the crowd a good chance to see his face.

"Be a Soldier in Peace or War," Is Togo's Secret for Success

"The secret for retaining youth is simple enough. Be a soldier; fighting keeps one young. Always be a good soldier, in war or in peace.

"It's the soldier in a man that makes him a success; it makes the good shoemaker; it makes the great financier; it makes the great arbitrator and it makes the highest type of patriot.

"Patriotism is greater than any other earthly tie. The greatest type a nation can produce is the soldier; great soldiers make a great country great. I would sever all personal ties, I would give up family and friends, did my country stand in her need demand it. That love of country is deeper to me than religion."—Admiral Togo in an interview.

An Instantaneous Wrinkle Remover

(From Eastern Styles.)

The average woman is always surprised to learn, after experimenting with all sorts of patent so-called "wrinkle removers" that the most effective remedy in the world is a simple face wash which she can make herself at home in a jiffy.

She has only to get an ounce of pure powdered saxolite from her nearest druggist and dissolve it in half a pint of witch hazel. Apply this refreshing solution to the face every day. The result is charming—marvelous. Even after the very first treatment the wrinkles show less plainly and the face has a nice, firm, comfortable feeling that is thoroughly delightful and lends self-confidence in one's appearance. This harmless home remedy is used by thousands of women to obliterate the unwelcome traces of time.

ARE YOU IN THE RIGHT FIELD

The AMERICAN Has Arranged to Send the Ten (10) Most Popular New England Baseball "Fans" to the World's Series Championship Games, Wherever They May Be Held.

Every Item of Necessary Expense Paid

The conditions of this offer are absurdly simple. A Voting Coupon will appear in each issue of the AMERICAN, Daily and Sunday, up to and including October 1st. The ten (10) contestants who receive the largest number of votes will be awarded the trips. In the event of ties the contestants so tied will each receive a similar trip.

Each Coupon in the DAILY AMERICAN will count for one (1) vote.

Each coupon in the SUNDAY AMERICAN will count for ten (10) votes.

Each Coupon will be good only for one week from the date it appears in the AMERICAN and valueless after one week.

Everyone, irrespective of age or residence, is eligible. You simply have to get your friends to buy the AMERICAN, Daily and Sunday, and to save the vote coupon, which will be found printed therein, for you. This is absolutely all! You do not have to enroll or even send in your name. Just start to-day and notify all of your friends that you are in the race—and in To Win. Every live "fan" in New England should go after these trips. The winners will see all of the World's Series Games, wherever they may be played, and everything possible will be done to make the trip enjoyable for all. You will find it so easy to accumulate votes that the way your standing rises will amaze you. The way to go about getting votes in this contest is first to organize your friends into a vote-getting society. Then let them set to work to get votes from all of their friends. Victory in this contest means the popularity championship of New England, an honor almost as big as the winning of a big league pennant. All baseball enthusiasts will be on an absolutely equal footing. The ones getting the most votes will win! The standing of contestants, with their vote totals, will be printed from time to time in the Sunday AMERICAN.

A COOLING SHAMPOO FOR SUMMER MONTHS

"Because of profuse perspiration and excessive oiliness of the scalp in summertime," writes Mrs. Mae Martyn, in the Los Angeles Globe, "many women find the hair difficult to manage. Ordinary shampoo mixtures fail to remove all dust and oil, and invariably leave the hair stringy and matted.

"The simplest and best thing with which to cleanse both scalp and hair is plain eantrox. A teaspoonful of eantrox dissolved in a cup of hot water is enough for a good shampoo, and a little at a time poured on the head and rubbed briskly creates a white, thick lather, wonderfully cooling and soothing. Rinsing leaves the scalp and hair delightfully clean and the hair dries quickly, taking on a beautiful brilliancy and softness."

The circulation of the AMERICAN is 300,000 more than its next highest competitor and 100,000 more than all the other evening papers of Boston combined.

WOO BY MAIL, WED AT SIGHT

MIDDLEBORO, August 17.—Married on the day of their first meeting after a courtship conducted through the mails, James H. McDowell, a prominent poultry dealer of this town and his bride, who was Miss Annie Klingley of Buffalo, are today on their honeymoon. The couple first became acquainted through a clipping in a newspaper about a year ago.

Their correspondence acquaintance ripened into correspondence love and McDowell asked Mrs. Klingley to come to Middleboro. She consented and arrived in Boston yesterday. McDowell met her at the train and they hurried to Middleboro. On the way Mellowell popped the question and Miss Klingley blushingly said "yes." A license was obtained from Town Clerk Albert A. Thomas, but the couple found difficulty in obtaining someone to perform the ceremony as all the ministers were out of town. After a diligent search they were hunted up by the Rev. C. R. Beatty, a retired Baptist minister, who married them in the parlor of his home in Nelson street.

McDowell conducts a poultry farm in Precinct street. He is thirty-three years of age and this is his second marriage.

FIREMEN VETS AT NEW BEDFORD

NEW BEDFORD, Aug. 17.—New Bedford is en fete to-day, engaged in the jubilant welcoming to its boundaries 5,000 veteran firemen from all parts of the New England States, who are gathered for the annual muster of the New England Veteran Firemen's League. For days the old whaling city has donned its festive attire. The streets, stores and residences are gay with flags and patriotic bunting, and it needed only the presence of the gallant veterans in their picturesque uniforms of red to complete the gala picture.

Every Train Brought a Throng.

To-day's muster is the biggest event ever held under the auspices of the Veteran Firemen's Association. From an early hour to-day the flocking of visitors on every train brought a full complement of firemen and guests, while the delegations from Fall River, Taunton, Brockton and all points of the Cape brought hundreds of recruits. It was estimated that over 4,000 veterans would be in the line of march and the parade, which is a feature of the muster, would be witnessed by 20,000 people.

The Boston contingent left the Hub in two special trains chartered by the Master League Committee. The first train left the South Station at 7:45 a. m. and reached New Bedford via Stoughton. The second train left at 8:30 a. m. The Providence veterans left on a special.

Over 600 firemen and guests were on hand.

No less than thirty-five engines participated in the parade, which started on Pleasant street, south of Maxfield, under Chief Marshal John T. Bryant. Promptly at 10 o'clock, the column moved. The route traversed was Maxfield street to Purchase street to Williams to Second to Union streets; Union to Pleasant street, past the Soldiers' Monument where the veterans were reviewed by Mayor Charles S. Ashley and the members of the city government; William street to County to Court to the grounds of the Buttonwood Park.

The first official event of the muster was the drawing of positions in the play out. The members were drawn at the New Bedford Veteran Firemen's headquarters Wednesday. The engines appeared in the parade in the order of the numbers drawn for the playout, with the New Bedford firemen leading.

Roster of the Parade.

The fire companies and their positions in the parade and the order in which they participated at the playout is as follows:

ASTOR IN LOVE AT FIRST SIGHT

BAR HARBOR, Aug. 17.—Summer cottagers here are recounting with great interest a reminiscence which tended to show that Colonel John Jacob Astor of first wife, Mrs. Ava Willing, was unconditional, the cause of his meeting Miss Madeleine Force, the young New York girl who is soon to become his second bride.

This is how they say it came about. Colonel Astor and his son Vincent steamed into Newport harbor on the yacht Nourmahal last August. The colonel sent word ashore that his Newport house be prepared for occupancy. Going to town next day he discovered, to his amazement, that the wife who divorced him had unexpectedly arrived in Newport and was preparing to spend the remainder of the season with her mother, Burton Willing, of Philadelphia. He had supposed she was going abroad.

Colonel Astor decided to remain a few days, so that it might not look as though he were fleeing from his former wife. In the meantime friends and relatives, going to little daughter, Muriel Astor, as a minor quarrel, which would soon be a novel reunion.

Embarrassed Colonel Astor.

The embarrassed Colonel Astor, as did the fact that he could not help occasionally meeting the woman who divorced him. So he took Vincent aboard the Nourmahal and steamed to Bar Harbor.

The next day Colonel Astor and Vincent were standing at the tennis courts, when the Force girls, Madeleine and Katherine, began a game. Colonel Astor was at once impressed with the beauty and the athletic prowess of the young New York visitor and inquired immediately to be presented. That same evening he and Miss Madeleine were partners in a mixed doubles match, as were Vincent and Miss Katherine Force.

Vincent and ever since then the colonel's attention to the pretty young girl beauty has been constant and intense.

Despite the nervous breakdown of Miss Force, preparations for her trousseau are actively under way. The International News Service was informed today that a modiste of the firm of Mandel & Co., of Fifth avenue, who is now in Paris, has been selected to select the wedding gown. This gown will be on its way from the Force girls' mother within a very few days.

The wedding dress is practically the only part of the trousseau that will not be of American design and workmanship. The same Fifth avenue firm which has the selection of the future Mrs. Astor's wedding outfit has also made her entire blue serge coat suits and several opera wrap and "house" over confections.

Many Hats Ordered.

Mrs. Force and her daughter have been dozens of late in the shops of a well known modiste along the avenue. This shop employs the patronage of Mrs. Nicholas Longworth and the New York branch of the Taft family. Louise, another famous modiste, has recently made Miss Force several dresses, but these are not strictly a part of the trousseau. Gowns, it was said, would be selected later on at Paris.

"Miss Force has given an order for a large number of hats in a Fifth avenue and Thirty-sixth street, house," the International News Service was informed. It has been decided to make the wedding, or at least the wedding reception, an affair fully in keeping with similar functions in the Astor family. It is possible that the marriage will take place in a nearby New Jersey or Connecticut town, and that the wedding party will then be whisked to the Astor town house, where an elaborate reception is to be held and a collation served. Thus Colonel Astor could obey the letter and uphold the prestige of his family. It can be definitely announced that he wedding will not take place at Newport.

Reports that a conference was to be held during the day between attorneys for Colonel Astor and the Force family, looking to the settlement of a large sum of money in lieu of dower rights upon Miss Force, met with vigorous denial. Colonel Astor refused to discuss the report that he is to settle $2,000,000 upon his young bride to be.

Two physicians were in attendance on Miss Force yesterday. They prescribed complete rest, and only members of the immediate family and Colonel Astor were permitted to see the young girl.

JOE TINKER IS BIG AID TO CUBS IN PENNANT FIGHT

RUSTLERS GO AFTER SECOND CUBS' GAME

By R. W. LARDNER.

The Rustlers will try to even things up with the Cubs by taking this afternoon's game, which is the second of the series. The job of pitching will fall to Bob Perdue, who was so effective against Brooklyn last time out.

The Boston bunch got six runs against Mordecai Brown yesterday, and that is some accomplishment. But the Cubs gave Brown a lovely setting in the batting and all the work of the fielders with their big jobs were well snagged, and it would have taken a mighty lot for us difficult to turn the tables on Chance's men.

Joe Birmingham is through as the Chicago boss. He and Cox are the only managers of a major club who are going all through a spectacle race now.

Joe Tinker is holding one of the places of honor in the Cubs batting order these days, the other reason being Jimmy Archer is having trouble with his batting. But Jim didn't do as well up to the fifth helpful of the game, and Joe stood to be seventh in the list, with occasional bouts to a more favorable position. He will be in third, right behind the home run kid, Mr. Saier, who is at final use of Heinie Zimmerman, who is swatting over the .300 mark.

For awhile Chance was using Jimmy Archer in this important space because Jimmy was having trouble with his bat

CY YOUNG WIRED OFFER TO PITCH FOR LYNN CLUB

Silk Hat Harry's Divorce Suit

By Tad

TO BE CONTINUED TO-MORRO W—SILK HAT HARRY'S DIVORCE SUIT IS THE TALK OF NEW ENGLAND—DON'T MISS THIS FUNNY SERIES IN SUNDAY'S AMERICAN.

LYNN WANTS TO SIGN CY YOUNG

LYNN, Aug. 17.—Eugene N. Frasier, president of the Lynn baseball team, has sent an urgent telegram to Cy Young, released unconditionally by Cleveland, asking the veteran's price for joining the New England League team for the remainder of the season. If this is satisfactory Frasier had received no reply to his telegram, but he expects one today.

The Lynn leader is pretty hard pressed for pitchers, Harrington, its star left hander, being out of the game with a severe attack of tonsilitis. Reiger and Buskirk are the only men left to do box duty, and the club has a double-header this afternoon with New Bedford. Although Frasier does not expect Young to report before Monday, if the veteran decides to try his hand in the minor league for a few days, the team will be enabled to make Reiger and Buskirk pitch all the games until then.

Mr. Frasier's telegram to Young asked the pitcher his price for playing with Lynn for twenty days, or the end of the New England League season on a non-reserve contract. While it is to be expected, according to Mr. Frasier, that Young's price will be large enough to put the Lynn team for ahead of the league leaders, the old man would be a drawing card which would far offset the daily fine of $25 for going short on salary limit.

If Young will consent to come to Lynn, the directors possibly will be willing to offer him a salary for twenty days which would be larger than that ever paid a New England League player," said Mr. Frasier. "We have got five pitchers, for with one man sick and the other two not going very well, we find it hard work to keep in the first division. Waller and Hanson have been released from the Eastern League, have not been heard from so we can say everything is possible, even to inducing Uncle Cy to come to Lynn."

FOUR IN LINE TO MEET ATTELL

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 17.—To put Abe Attell, world's featherweight champion, in the Vernon ring on the afternoon of New Year's Day against the survivor of the present 122-pound battlers under contract to him, is the plan of Promoter T. J. McCarey.

Frankie Conley boxes Patsey Kline. Joe Rivers meets Johnny Kilbane, and then the two winners are to clash. The man on the top at the finish of the three bouts gets a chance at Attell's crown.

Conley, with his manager, Harry Gilmore Jr., have arrived in this city and will open training quarters at the St. Ignatius Club to-morrow. Gilmore claims that he started for the coast under the false impression that the Conley-Kline battle was set for August 29.

The correct date is August 19. McCarey already had his printing out. Gilmore is anxious to effect a postponement of at least one week in order to give his protege time to become acclimated.

In all probability C. E. Eyton will officiate as referee in the Conley-Kline bout and may perhaps handle all the important battles between, now and the first of the year.

JIMMY MORAN TO QUIT BIKE RACING

After the race Saturday evening at Revere Beach with Vanderstuyft, Lawrence Morin, the famous cyclist, has declared his intention of retiring from the racing game. Moran has just returned from Europe, where he has had a very successful season on foreign tracks, and consequently the best man in Europe this season. Many classic events in cycle racing were captured by the American, although the most notable of which was the championship of Europe, which he won at Roubaix, May 18.

Moran will retire on account of his fast growing business interests in Boston and Revere. He has acquired a fortune in the racing game and is one of the wealthiest professional athletes in America.

Collins defeated Moran in a 10-mile motor-paced race last night at Newark, N. J., the former finishing a lap ahead in 14 m. 19 2-5 s.

OLD COLONY CLUB IN FIELD DAY OF SPORTS

BUZZARDS BAY, Aug. 17.—The annual outing of the Old Colony Club, of late President Grover Cleveland and Joe Jefferson fame, will be held at Monument Beach, August 25. The committee, which consists of Hon. William A. Nye of Bourndale, Colonel Harry E. Converse of Marion, and Walter Rapp of Brockton, is making arrangements for the big "show." The feature will be the sporting events such as water races, fat men's races, both on land and in the water, baseball and "near" baseball games and running races.

PAGE CLASS PLAY WESTVILLE A. A. NINE

Next Saturday at the Dorchester High School grounds, Dunbar avenue, the Page Class team, who are now in the series for the championship of Dorchester, and the Westville A. A. team, composed of some of the strongest amateur players of Dorchester, will meet. A good game is expected and the followers of both nines will be on hand in full numbers.

On August 28 the Page Class go to Gloucester to play a benefit game for the Haskins Hospital of Rockport.

KLAUS FAVORITE OVER THOMPSON

By JACK CONWAY.

Shortly after the old-fashioned mission clock in the well kept sitting-room of the good pastor of the "Little Church Around the Corner" over in New York town struck half-past nine this evening a rather stocky looking announcer will crawl through the ropes at Tom O'Rourke's National Sporting Club and in a deep baritone voice will say something like this: "Ladies, gentlemen and twenty-two cooties. This evening we have with us Mr. Frank Klaus of the fair city of Pittsburg and Mr. "Cyclone Johnny" Thompson of Sycamore, Illinois. The boys will battle for the 'middleweight championship' of the world."

And therewith the gong will clang and both Mr. Klaus and Mr. Thompson will leave their respective corners with the one intention of knocking the other fellow's head off. "And the man who does the most "knocking" will be declared the winner by the press.

"The bout is staged for the "middleweight championship" of the world. But just now neither Klaus nor Thompson is the acknowledged superior of every middleweight in the country. "Philly" Papke, Hugo Kelly, Bob Moha and several others will have something to say before it is finally decided upon whose head the middleweight crown will finally rest. Just now it looks as though the "Illinois Thunderbolt" has a little something on the rest of the field.

"To-night's show will be a whirlwind affair. Neither one knows a thing a great deal about scientific boxing. It will be a case of "go and take" from the time the gong clangs until the bout comes to an end. And Johnny will be seen "giving" and "taking," too, if past performances count for anything.

Frank Klaus Looks Best.

On paper the youthful Klaus, with his sensational speed and punishing ability, is picked to nose out a winner over the battle scarred Thompson, the hero of over two hundred hard fought battles in the ring.

Thompson, however, is no hard hitter as his young antagonist from the city of smoke, but if it is a question as to whether he will be able to stand the terrific pace which the Pittsburg "Heat-Ett" is sure to make.

The fighters will weigh in at 158 pounds at 8 o'clock. Neither man should experience the least difficulty in making the weight. Klaus has fought most of his battles at 154 pounds, while for the past year "Cyclone Johnny" has toured the country under the guise of a lightweight.

When the Sycamore boxer left for Australia a year ago he was a lightweight of good standing. But during his trip across the briny Pacific, Johnny took to himself an awful appetite. He would eat about everything on the bill of fare and then he would be hungry.

When Johnny's scoring think of that old proverb which originated in the think tank of Jack Johnson, Sam Langford or some other colored star: "If you don't succeed the first time, try, try again." And the Sycamore mill dispenser would tackle the job over and over again with the result that when the good old gong sounds, Johnny is travelled, pulled in at Sydney, he was a full fledged middleweight. And he's been one ever since.

In Bout With Lewis.

When he returned to New York after his tour of the world, Thompson fought Willie Lewis in a ten-round matinee. The bout was billed as the real thing but failed to materialize. Lewis was scored the losing Pacific

Standing of the Clubs in Ordinary Series	P.	W.	L.	P.C.
Umpirines	15	9	6	.600
Starfish Glums	15	8	7	.533
Wasps	15	6	9	.400
Wild Cats	15	4	11	.266

The Umpirines pulled the Wild Cats off the dock for yesterday's game. Socks, of the Umpirines, was in the box for the Wild Cats and was touched for a total of 14 hits. There were so many side surprises pulled during the contest that we do not know where to begin our narrative. We are able to get inside information with special agents on the baseball dope, as we do not think it the right idea, but we cannot help it on this occasion.

As far as the game went it was pretty fair. Whizzlewhan, of the Wild Cats, and "Eaglebeak" Sprender, of the Umpirines, played up to their regular standard, but their work did not show up very well alongside of the commotion Socks, the old reliable umpire of the league, required to be on hand. Socks is not the same Socks that he was in the early season. He has been off his game for a long time, and it was generally expected that he would be started in making a fool of himself by trying to keep one eye on his job and the other on Emily Morton, to whom it is rumored that he is engaged. From the start of the game something seemed to be wrong with our old friend. He got balls mixed up with strikes and pulled everything that a bonehead umpire could think of. In the fifth inning he came pretty near getting all mussed up by "Eaglebeak" Spruder, but Emily Morton intervened on his behalf and saved him a black eye.

There is no doubt that Socks is not the same reliable young man that he was before he went away to the country and accumulated that bank roll. We are told he is in love. We have only seen a few people in our time afflicted that way, so we may not be very good judges of just how persons should get under the spell. Socks's case is pitiful, he is ruining his reputation by trying to think of two things at once and shattering his health and his bank roll by treating Emily to ice cream sodas. There is no telling where he will wind up now that he is started.

We expect a lot of new dope for tomorrow's paper. It might to worth glancing at.

The Test of Love

By DORO THY DIX

WHAT is the real test of love? By what infallible symptoms can we determine whether we have succumbed to the tender passion, or are merely ailing in some other way?

By what means are we to gauge the feeling that either men and women entertain for each other, and tell whether their affection is purely platonic, or of the burning, sizzling, never-dying, life-everlasting brand?

No other problem with which humanity has ever grappled is so difficult of solution, for love is not only like the chameleon in its ability to change its color to match its environment, it also resembles the Dutchman's wicked flea in that when you try to put your finger on it it generally isn't there. Therefore it is not more difficult to tell whether our neighbors are in love than it is to decide whether we are in love ourselves, and the wrong guesses that are made on the subject strew the shores of time with matrimonial wrecks, and furnish business for the salvage corps of the divorce courts.

All of this makes it of the uttermost importance that we should have some authoritative standard by which we can gauge our love, and this long-felt want has just been supplied by Mr. Newell Martin, for his name be emblazoned in letters of gold in Temple of Fame.

Discarding the highfalutin notions and dreams of angels and seraphs and ever-blooming Edens watered by crystal streams of the poet, and the thrills and chills and hectic flushes of romances, Mr. Martin comes right down to grass roots and hands out a certified footrule by which any woman, or man, can take the accurate dimensions of another's affections for him or her.

According to Mr. Martin, the homely garbage pail is the real measure of man's love for woman, and every married woman, at least, will agree with it.

What Mr. Martin Said

Mr. Martin—a second Daniel come to judgment, if there ever was one—was the referee in the Gaylord divorce case, in which the testimony showed that Thomas G. Gaylord, a banker, carried home the groceries and set out the garbage pail for a woman who, he said, was only his landlady.

In commenting upon this evidence and finding for the wife, Mr. Martin said:

"A man's affection for a woman is shown by his willingness to take trouble in her behalf, to do little services for her, to decorate her person and to perform willing hand that which a man not in love would deem tiresome, troublesome and disgusting. It was the kind of Gaylord that set out the garbage can. Nobody would set out a woman's garbage can for her but her servant, her husband or her sweetheart."

These words are apples of gold set in pictures of silver, and they are only too true, for what wife is there among us all, who is past her honeymoon, who would dare to apply the acid test of love even to her husband's affections, by asking him to set out the garbage pail? Truly, only a lover's hand could be trusted to find pleasure in that task.

But jesting aside, Mr. Martin has gone to the very root of the matter and named the only test of love that is worth a button. All the oaths of devotion that lovers swore by lovers since the world began are nothing but hot air. All of the leaping of the pulses at the touch of a particular hand, the clinging arms, and kissing lips are a matter of personal magnetism that is gone when the spell is broken. Even the inability to find happiness out of some one particular individual's presence is immaterial, irrational and unjustifiable as evidence of love.

The Real Test

The only real, genuine test of love is unselfishness toward the beloved one, and a desire to do or sacrifice all for her. Whenever the time comes when you think of somebody else's happiness or pleasure before your own, then Cupid has hit you certain.

When a man is in love with a woman he doesn't sit around telling her so, and wasting time writing sonnets to her eyebrows. He rolls up his sleeves and tackles the job with forty-horsepower more energy than he ever put in his work before, because every tick belongs him nearer the little home he can see her in, and every burden that he takes on his shoulders means just that much more ease and comfort for her.

The man who doesn't find his highest joy in working for a woman, and trying to stand between her and the hardships of life, professes the game of love when he takes it on his lips. The man who comes unloads all of his ill temper at home, and who says things to his wife that he would not dare to say to any hoeky gentleman who could knock him down for his insults.

Nor does the woman love a man for whom she is not willing to get up and get breakfast, and wash his clothes, if necessary, and do anything else that will help him on the road to success. The woman who loves finds her greatest joy in doing little menial services for her husband, for they are glorified by the tenderness that she puts into them. She can express more real emotion in a pan of biscuit than would suffice for a hundred poems of passion.

Yes, Mr. Martin is right. Setting out the garbage pail is the real measure of love.

Day's Best Story

Those long, long days that bore you so are just away. Idles, and tries to kick down the stairs at night. You told me that if I once got him at your price I wouldn't part with him for a hundred dollars."

"Will you wed?"

"At last the wife is out of the way, and they aren't losing much time in profiting by it!" Michel said to himself.

This put a rather different complexion on his business. He had been sent after Nora Verney in the hope of running down Ian Barr. But since Ian Hereward came to St. Pierre de Chartreuse, Michel's theory of the murder was shaken. What if after all, the elder Ian knew more about it than the younger, and Barr were but a scapegoat?

Of course, it would soon be known at headquarters that Sir Ian was here, if it were not known already, since the ex-officer was under observation; yet some kudos might be gained, in spite of that fact, if Michel played his cards well. He intended to let not the smallest chance slip, and the eyes which flashed from Sir Ian to Teresina Ricardo and Nora Verney were the merciless eyes of a lynx.

Saw Baronet Start

Michael saw Sir Ian start as if with astonishment at the sight of the two women; saw him hesitate in the doorway as if he were minded to beat a retreat; saw Miss Ricardo turn scarlet, and Nora Verney grow as pale as if she were faint, and heard the elder woman exclaim: "Sir Ian!"

Still, the detective's conviction that this encounter was a "put-up job" did not waver for an instant. He thought that Sir Ian was a creditable actor, and but perhaps Miss Ricardo had not wished the first meeting to take place like this, on the public verandah, in the presence of half a dozen people. It would be like a woman to have planned out something more romantic, and to be disappointed!

Michel was not long in time to witness a somewhat dramatic little scene, which he would not have missed for a great deal.

The two ladies, whom Michel admired extremely, were chatting with the landlord, a lessee personnes having been sent to welcome the newcomer, when in the door way appeared Sir Ian Hereward.

Detective Delighted

Michel had never seen Sir Ian in the flesh, but he had studied his features in many newspaper supplies, and during the last ten days, asking himself whether or no the face was the face of a murderer. He had employed it lavishly, keeping to the startling conclusion that the meeting, at a remote village in France, had been arranged between Sir Ian and Teresina Ricardo.

Here was something better than he had dreamed of expecting, and he was delighted. The fact that this man and the woman journeyed so far from their world to meet each other seemed to prove that Miss Ricardo had neglected herself in saying that Ian Hereward had not loved her long ago in India.

They had been separated for years, these two; and as they had apparently met in private only once on the afternoon of the murder since the old days, it had been a most unlikely business between them, or they would not be keeping this tryst so secretly.

ABOUT 5 o'clock on the third day the carriage containing the two ladies and their light luggage drove up before one of the best hotels in the beautiful little village of St. Pierre de Chartreuse. Michel was near enough in his following conveyance to see them received by the landlord.

No look of recognition passed between the proprietor of the hotel and the man who had brought his guests from Old Monaux. This was odd, for if the fellow really came from St. Pierre de Chartreuse, he would almost certainly have been sent by the hotel at which Miss Ricardo meant to stay.

When the two dressing bags and suitcases had been carried into the hotel, the young man still stood by the horses' heads. On the wide balcony at the top of the steps Miss Ricardo and Nora Verney consulted together for a moment in low voices.

Then Miss Ricardo took an envelope out of her guide book, and gave it to Miss Verney. She ran down with it to the driver. She put it in his hand, and said a few words to him with an apparently careless air. Then she went into the hotel, unloaded all of his ill temper at home, and who says things to us with that he would not dare to say to any hoeky gentleman who could knock him down for his insults.

Man the Boy's Revenge

By ADA PATTERSON.

WHY are men vain? Ugly men, grouchy men, stupid men, ineffective men, failures in some or all respects—why is every man alive confident?

This question, echoing down the ages, has had no answer. I make modest claim to having found it. The man is the boy's revenge.

The whole world, barring that eccentric little half portion of an island, England, is in a conspiracy to put a boy in his place. And a most insignificant place it is. Everybody scouts him. His mother, because she is, which is his natural excitement, rasps her nerves. His sisters, because he is rude and teasing. His sisters' girl friends, because when he comes into the room where they are having a nice, feminine, talky time, his lanky, embarrassed color, his big feet and huge reined hands and his swinging shoulders seem to fill the place. The ten minutes he is there—he dare not stay longer—they spend eyeing him critically and wishing he would go. His father tells him he is a nuisance and assures him his opinions on all subjects are half inked. Big boys test the strength and speed of their muscles on him, caring not at all on which portion of his anatomy they make the muscle test, but seeming to prefer somewhat his face, because there the sores of battle are more flamboyant.

He is a general object of suspicion in his neighborhood. If anything goes wrong the presumption is that he did it.

Blamed for All.

If greedy robins stripped a ripe cherry tree of its fruit before the owner of the tree was out of his bed in the morning, the owner of the mutilated tree knows what there boy' did it. That a boy might have coveted the fruit but resisted the temptation to steal it never occurs to anyone. If the cat is locked up in the cellar or the dog is discovered adorned with a clashing tin can the charge is specific. No only is it a foregone conclusion that it was the crime of a boy, but this boy did it.

If the windows of an empty house are broken nobody takes the trouble to remember that tramps were seen in the neighborhood the evening before. A boy likes to throw stones. There is a private score with father from which the object of affliction, the boy, comes forth a sorer and sadder mortal.

Anything is good enough for the boy in the family. His clothes are coarse because the economies of family opinion is that he is so rough that he will soon wear them out. Besides, he grows so outrageously fast that it doesn't much matter how he looks.

He is told that he must not ask for a second helping of children "when there is company," and he must be content with any rare or lousy portion that may be given him.

His allotment of space is the coldest and most barely furnished part of the house, save that apportioned to "the help."

He gets more frowns than smiles, and the smiles he provokes are generally those of derision.

Yesterday, on a ferry boat, I saw a woman who was talking with his mother with good-naturedly at a boy, a red-haired, freckled, wistful-eyed lad. His surprise, gratitude and joy were so great that they matched his awkwardness. He leaned so far backward over the rail while accepting and returning "the time of day" with a recognition that he nearly fell overboard.

When He Is Twenty-One.

This state of the youthful male of our species endures from the time he bears at two and a half that he is "a big, bad, noisy boy" and that "he will be terribly spanked if he wakes dear little angel sister from her sleep," until he approaches eighty twenty-one and casts his first vote. At or about that time the male human worm turns. The eyes that have been wistful grow bold. The gait that was apologetic becomes a swagger.

From having been of no account he becomes of great account. He is checked and derided, he is now courted and encouraged. He has become an economic possession to be kept. Grave doubts begin to earn their living for them, a political possibility to the candidate or his henchmen, who send delicious thrills up and down his spine by addressing him "Dear Sir" in letter and "Old Man" at primary meetings.

From having been nobody he becomes somebody. Surprise and delight cause a flood of blood to the head. From this congestion he never recovers. The state becomes a permanent one. We have named it masculine vanity.

TING-A-LING! went the bell, and Ebenezer, the industrious one, sprang from his stool, and in a moment stood in the room of Maxim Multigraft, the millionaire financier.

"Ebenezar," said the chief, "I have observed you industry. Your zest for work astonishes me. No detail seems too small to escape you, no task too great for you to accomplish. You are the first to arrive in the morning, and the last to leave at ——"

"Oh, thank you, sir—thank you!" cried Ebenezer, and waited, wondering whether it would be a five or a ten dollar rise, or whether it would be a managership for him.

"Hence, Ebenezar," growled Multigraft, "I want you to clear out this week. It's men of your stamp who worm out all the business secrets, and then go and start a rival show in the next street. Beat it!"

"I WAS a dull and dismal house, and—haunted! No one ever lived there—except, of course, the ghost—till Binks came! Binks, the brave, who jeered at ghosts and scoffed at spectres.

But the first night he slept in the dark, mysterious mansion the ghost came, an awful, fearsome figure it was, and the clanking of its chains wakened even Binks. He saw the ghostly finger pointing at him, and——

Two minutes later Binks, the Brave, was breaking records on the moonlit highway. He did the hundred yards under ten seconds, and at the end of half a mile sank exhausted by the wayside.

A hollow cough sounded near him, and Binks turned. There, by his side, sat the ghost!

"That was a great run we had," observed the spectral one pleasantly.

"You're right!" gasped Binks. "And if you'll only wait—till I get my breath—we'll have another one!"

TO GROW HAIR ON A BALD HEAD

BY A SPECIALIST.

Thousands of people suffer from baldness and falling hair who, having tried nearly every advertised hair tonic and hair-grower without results, have resigned themselves to baldness and its attendant discomfort. Yet their case is not hopeless; the following simple home prescription has made hair grow after years of baldness, and it is also unequalled for restoring gray hair to its original color, stopping hair from falling out, and destroying the dandruff germ. It will not color the hair green, and can be put up by any druggist: Bay Rum, 6 ounces; Lavona de Compose, 2 ounces; Menthol Crystals, one-half drachm. If you wish it perfumed, add half to one teaspoonful of Toilet Perfume, which unites perfectly with the other ingredients. This preparation is highly recommended by physicians and specialists, and is absolutely harmless, as it contains none of the poisonous wood alcohol so frequently found in hair tonics. Do not apply to the face or where hair is not desired.

Before publication we presented this prescription to Miss James Dug Gamage, the city, and they state that she have tried it never times the their patrons who report most astonishing results from its use.

Claude Delnire, hero, and Rosamond, beautiful girl, hurry across the log over the chasm. Little do they know of Desmond, villain, or the snares he has set to escape from the death to which they had sent him on the rumaway balloon. But Desmond did escape, and now, his heart filled with bitterness, he is on the trail of the lovers.

Villainy as well as virtue meets its drawbacks. As Desmond, white villain, and the Wild Man, black villain, hurry across country after the lovers, they come upon a horde of fierce porcupines resting upon the top of a ledge. There are few things less inviting than a porcupine, especially if you don't wear shoes.

But it takes more than a thousand porcupines to foil such a resourceful villain as Desmond. He instantly sees that a man on stilts could successfully defy all the porcupines in or out of Borneo, and now upon a horde of fierce porcupines he devises a plan of campaign, so the Wild Man is promptly strapped to the impravised stilts.

Here we see why the Wild Man was strapped to the stilts. The reason is that he may carry Desmond, who has thus a comfortable position in the rear. This desperate savage bears the burden of white man. Without scathe, the evil pair pass over the huge field of bristling porcupines, and everything seems to bode ill for the lovers.

Snakes are unpleasant things, even in behind the bars of a cage. But much more disagreeable if the reptiles are rusning wild and free there spread to catch him. A evil is an easy enough thing to get into, but mighty hard to get out of. See how that ingenious picture must show a thrilling situation. Don't miss them, or those of Little Philip.

Very Different

By KENNETT HARRIS

I FEAR there can be little doubt that she I call My Own
Is growing—well, we'll call it stout. I may say, she has grown.
It takes some reach to span her waist, but she is nee to blame,
And I should call it wretched taste to comment on the same.

I've never spoken of her weight. I know she'd not forgive
Allusions to her wheezy state. She's very sensitive.
It's possible that I might strike a person as a chump,
But I remark to her I fear—and I admit it's galled:
"You need a nice toupee, my dear, you're getting very bald."

Of course I do get mad at that and generally say,
"Perhaps I look a switch or rat, but not a nice toupee.
I wish, my darling, that you'd stop that silly sort of rot.
I may be somewhat thin on top, but bald I know I'm not."

Upon my shapely cranium the hair is set so dense
In certain places as in some, but bald, that's lack of sense.
When I get bald I shall not care, I can't be always young.
But don't you think that if I were, she ought to hold her tongue?

The Importance of the Ideal

By MRS. ANNIE BESANT

"MAN is the creature of thought," you may read in one of the sacred books of India. "As you think, you will become." In another place it says: "Man is constructed from his convictions; as he thinks, so he is."

These words are in perfect accord with psychological science of to-day, which recognizes in the ideas the invariable causes of all actions. In the human being, the will moves, the thought directs and the deed accomplishes, and the action is nothing but the manifestation of the idea. The destinies of a man, of a nation, depend upon the ideas that dominate the mind of the individual and the collective minds of society respectively. The rabble, filled with an idea of beauty, picks up his brush and paints a masterpiece. Prince, intoxicated with the idea of liberty, throws itself upon Europe to break its fetters. Idea always precedes action; idea is the creator, action the creature.

Inspires the Soul

But there are differences among ideas. Vague, vacillating, unsteady, unformed, they leave only a passing imprint upon the character; the rooted ideas rule it. The fixed idea, according to psychologists, is an idea that dominates the mind, which remains in spite of all reasoning, of all temptations, of all forces to which ordinary humanity succumbs. This idea is true, beautiful, in harmony with the laws of nature, it lends the man it rules to the highest level of the most splendid virtues. If it is wrong, it plunges the unfortunate into the abysses of fanaticism or folly.

Ideal is to man a firm idea of the moral world, tending to mould the character and to inspire the soul. He who has no ideals drifts upon the ocean of life, thrown hither and thither by the currents of circumstances, of attraction and repulsion, without any goal, without any settled destination. He who has formed his ideal and determined to live up to it, goes straight ahead, stoops only to conquer and makes circumstances give in to his set purpose. Ideal is like a vessel that readily obeys the rudder.

In the education of the young the most important thing is to pose before their eyes a living and elevated ideal, incorporated as much as possible in the great men and women of the fatherland, examples of religious and civic virtues. The vivid imagination of the child makes these portraits living, and it draws from them those with which it designs the image of a hero, conforming to its aspirations and hopes. Whether it desires to become a statesman, minister, soldier, merchant, artist or simply a good citizen, it finds in the ideal you set before it qualities that correspond to its aspirations and will construct its own ideal, an ideal which is to become its guardian angel and protect it against all the vices and temptations of life.

When you have chosen your ideal, you must look intently and lovingly upon it for some moments each morning. This morning thought, repeated during the day, will soon begin to make the qualities contained in the idea take root in your character. Even without any conscious effort on your part, the beauties of the ideal will manifest themselves in your character, for thought is fertile and breeds qualities.

Breed Own Kind

It must be admitted that the wrong, low and evil thoughts also breed view of their own kind, and when you sow evil ideas in a receptive they will germinate in the character of the citizens and bring forth a harvest of vice and crime Books, papers and pictures sow everywhere ideas that create good or bad citizens. If you may elevate the minds of others by your noble ideals, you may also debase them by evil thoughts, and it is first of all the mind of children and the young that are subject to the influence of thought.

To set before the people noble, high, brotherly ideas, full of love and justice, is to help to found a great, happy and powerful nation, while to set before them gross, profane and frivolous ideas is to degrade your country, for thought, being the creative force of the universe, creates good or evil and those who empolson the fountainhead of human activity are the enemies of humanity

Fixing the Price

IT was during his annual fortnight by the sad sea waves that he met her, and ere many days had passed he was madly in love—nay, desperately in love.

"Ah," he cried, as they stood on the silent river pier, "I am poor, and you are rich! But true love levels all things, and"—

"It cannot be!" she interrupted sadly.

"Then this must be my last resort," he exclaimed passionately, and drew forth a gleaming revolver from his breast.

Critically the fair maiden glanced at the shining weapon.

"It seems all right," she said encouragingly. "You should be able to get five or six dollars on that!"

A Thrilling Story of Wireless and War

THE man in the raincoat, who had been squatting contemplatively on the berth-edge, swung forward to his feet at this. His many-lined, heavy, red face had lost its color until it remained only a faded brick-dust tint.

"You see!" cried the women more tremulously. "He even confesses it to me. It surprises him that I should know so much. But there are other things I know. I know that he was the instigator of the Orfuoco Colonization frauds.

"I know he was once a Cuban blockade-runner, and once an agent of Don Carlos, the Spanish pretender. I know that he was a gun smuggler into the Balkans at the same time that he was being made a pasha by his friend, the Sultan of Turkey."

She paused for breath and pointed mockingly at her enemy's short, thick fingers as they slowly clenched and unclenched.

"Look at His Hands"

"Look at his hands and you will see! He went to Lhassa in the pay of a Russian secret agent. And they caught him and crucified him on one of their prayer-walls—they nailed him there through his hands.

"You can see the marks! He can't lie those away, for he hung there twelve hours until a tribesman set him free and spirited him across the frontier. And this is the great soldier who gave you money—"

Ganley once more broke in on her as she stopped to pant for breath.

"These are a pack o' lies!" he cried, and his voice was rasping and fierced, as though it required a great effort for him to utter the words. "They are all damned lies!"

The woman pointed to the little particles of white paper scattered about the floor.

"And that was not an agreement with this man?" she derisively asked.

This man made an agreement with me, an open and honest agreement."

"Honest!" interpolated the scornful woman.

"And he had no right of saying yes or no to it. He's past the age of being wet-nursed into what he wants to do.

"Then he had the right to know what he was tied up with," parried the scoffing woman.

The Charge

"He still has the right of saying yes or no to that agreement," declared Ganley in a voice brought his great, russet-colored hand down to the berth-edge with a sudden blow. "But what's he to you, anyway?"

She looked from one to the other of the two men before her. But McKinnon gave her no chance to reply. The moment he had been waiting for had already arrived.

"I've had enough of this," he said as he held his hand out towards the sullen-eyed Ganley. In this outstretched hand was a roll of bills held together by a rubber band

"What's this?"

"It's your money" said McKinnon.

"I won't take it!" retorted the other.

"You won't take it?"

"No; until you show me a reason why we should split." He jerked a contemptuous thumb towards the raincoated woman. "And I don't call that a reason"

"The whole thing's too tangled up for me," equivocated the operator.

"There's no tangle when it's parted down to the truth."

"But we can't argue about that all night, and I've got my key to attend to," complained the watchful McKinnon.

A new look of anxiety flashed across the other man's face at the mention of the key. It was a flash, and nothing more.

"Then you believe what she says?" asked Ganley more soberly, looking from the paper-littered floor to the woman still standing motionless against the cabin wall.

"You bet I do," disputed the wireless operator with a gesture of diminished belligerent.

"I'm proving and disproving nothing," was Ganley's reply. "I haven't been doing the talking. I'm not the talking kind. But I've come into touch with this kind of a woman before. I know her, and she and her whole gang can't bamboozle me."

"Well?" said McKinnon a little impatiently.

"Oh, I've known her ever since she hitched up with that crooked little concession hunter called Boynton."

"Stop!" cried the girl.

"For three years now she's been a feeder for that one-lunged climber, that Yaqui renegade who's been trying to pose as a Spaniard. They're the team who went down yonder with a cooked up claim on the Caranay Rubber Trusts territory."

"Stop!" cried the indignant girl, more shrilly. The scene in some way reminded McKinnon of a meeting between a cat and a mouse, and more he grew to resent the fact that this fragile and isolated figure should be dragged through such unseemly scenes of scurrility. But Ganley was not to be stopped.

Left Him Dazed

"And when they'd wrung their money out of that," he declared, "they dished up a Locomobian nitrate claim and drained that dry. And now that was picked clean they wheedled their way into Duran's good graces. And then, to clinch her graft, this woman, this pink-and-white beauty right here, she married a Kentucky-Dunlin half-caste filibuster who'd made a half million out of brandy smuggling and counterfeiting."

A wave of something that was vaguely disheartening, that was almost nauseating, swept through McKinnon. It left him momentarily dazed, as men are dazed with that forlornest sickness which follows on a nervous upheaval.

He felt as though the deck under his feet had opened and let him down into the depths of a chilling sea. Insidiously and almost unwittingly he had grown to believe that this unbefriended and lonely woman was in some way very close to him.

Little by little he had come to accept the hope that they might draw even closer together, that the exigencies of war fare might make their paths identical.

But as he stood listening to Ganley's thundered declaration there swept through him the impression of being engulfed and suffocated in fogs of obscurity of being entangled in endless webs of lies and intrigues and counter-intrigues. He felt suddenly oppressed and deceived by a sense of unlooked for and undefined conspiracy, beyond conspiracies of bewildering and inscrutable forces at play all about him.

"Is this true?" he demanded of the woman before him.

His question was almost a prayer for his own denial. He could see that the scene through which she had passed had sorely taxed her strength. She was no longer a girl, but a woman who had known and confronted life.

"Is this true?" he repeated, and even as he asked it he felt that whatever part she might be playing in that crowded drama he would in the end be compelled to stand by her.

"No," whispered the woman white to her lips. "It is not true."

"Have you a husband?"

"No," she still answered in her low voice. The monosyllable was pronounced yet he could see by her face that she was suffering.

Ganley laughed outright. It was not a pleasant laugh.

"And you never married a mongy, half caste diamond-worming Senior Domingan named de Peralta?" demanded the man on the berth-edge.

"I married a man named Peralta, discovered the woman slowly, her measured eyes on McKinnon as she spoke.

"Then It Is True!"

"Then it is true!" A note of inconsolate bitterness rang through McKinnon's sharp query.

"Yes," she answered.

"But you have just said you had no husband!"

He was dragged from the carriage half an hour after the ceremony."

Snobbery and Carelessness

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

Copyright, 1911, by the National News Association

IF the wise men of the nation assembled in solemn conclave decided that the Commandments were not enough to meet modern human needs and delegated you in your superior wisdom to write the eleventh, what would it be?

You might go to the mountain top to await inspiration, or you might wander among the men of the earth, noting their weaknesses, their foibles, their faults and their temptations, or you might be honest with yourself and make an appeal for that which will safeguard you; you might do this, and more, but could you in your search among men and mountains find a commandment that would fit conditions more urgently demand than this:

"Thou shalt not be a snob."

Don't Be Careless

If you say, "Pooh, pooh, no need to take the time of those higher up; if you are the only woman of your kind on earth, and do not think less of a friend because that friend is poor; if you are a little girl and enjoy the companionship of the janitor's daughter better than that of the daughter of the most aristocratic tenant in the building; if you are above the little petty class distinctions made by dollars and ruffles, this commandment will seem to you absolutely unnecessary. And here's hurrah to you if that is the case!

To those, then, who do not need a commandment forbidding snobbery (if any there be) there still remains the need of this commandment

"Thou Shalt Not Be Guilty of Carelessness."

Nowhere in this broad earth is there any one who does not need the daily and hourly application of a commandment against the sin of carelessness. We are careless in our dress that no one can tell at a glance if we are coming or going, and those of us most guilty of this kind of carelessness look like the dinner table following after a feast. We are careless in our statements and say "seventeen" when we mean "seven"; we are careless in our work, and marred at the proudest of the sun who is careful; we are careless in our ambitions, and hand out our projects when they are half fledged, and change our plans as often as a girl changes her hair ribbons, and wonder that they do not succeed.

Every Person Guilty

We are careless in our handwriting and a letter written to a remiss telling him we refuse to go on his note is illegible that he interprets it for an invitation for his wife and seven children to come on an indefinite visit, and they arrive on the next train.

We are careless in our reading, and devour books that are so worthless that nature the brain sag like an overloaded hammock; we are so careless in our eating that the pepsin and hot water bottle become our best friends, and from the time we cease beasly oversleep in the morning till the time we go to bed indigestion and its little overeating and late hours at night we are guilty of the violation of this badly needed Seventh Commandment.

If you are not guilty of carelessness, and know not snobbery, and are a paragon, then you have the good wisdom, should the Eleventh Commandment be? If the wise men of the nation gathered in solemn conclave should suggest as the little Eleventh Commandment, what form and number of human weakness would you assail?

The Imitation Woman

By WINIFRED BLACK

"NEW YORK women are nothing but bundles of vanity," says the son of Mrs. Hetty Green. "I wouldn't marry one for the world.

Pshaw, now, Mr. Green, you don't say so. Honest and truly, does your heart of a nice little thing in a walking-skirt, skirty coat and an umbrella hat and little foolish kickaboo shoes should snuggle up to you and say, "Oh, how sweet it must be to be a great, big, strong, brave, strong man," would you turn haughtily away and wish she was six feet tall and wore a combrees and a divided skirt and could ride any bronche in Texas? Would you, now, really?

Well, maybe you would, but whisper all the girls you see in New York aren't New Yorkers. Most of 'em are from New Jersey, or Delaware or Mississippi or Kansas, just come to town and being more New Yorkish every minute.

The New York girl keeps off of Fifth avenue and Broadway, really she does.

You see she's so busy. There's Browning class and her Tennessee Claflin and her sewing class and her riding lesson and her old gown from Hobson's to be remade into a stylish one, and her trip to Chicago to be entertained and her friend to be helped to his studies, not taking a course in Columbia right now, but maybe she can't the funny woman you are parading up and down and kitten and purring and being nice. Not at all.

Just the Imitation

That just the imitation woman, and besides in a thick fog it is easy to do, and she powders her nose and rubbers her cheeks and blackens her eyebrows and wears her veil down and her hair puffy and fluffy, oh, that over-sexed woman always has such wisps of hair, I wonder if they are forwarded on her high bonds and thinks she's the real lady.

Poor creature! Why, she's no more in a cent woman than the little apricot French doll in the toy shop window, and she is like a real pink-toed, gurgling, laughing, crying, snuggly baby.

She has an inviting skin and an intimate waist and imitation hair, and she carries in her purse little silk bound memorandum books, where she writes down all that imitation brains, and she lives an imitation life and some day, poor, little, foiled make believe she'll die, and some one will do their best to give her an imitation funeral. And nobody will come to it but the janitor and the hairdresser's clerk who are there to see if any one acts as if there was going to be money enough to pay the bills, and a dear, real, true friend who reads the notice of the death in the papers, some one who knew her when she seemed almost real.

Where are the imitation friends and the imitation sweethearts, and the imitation flatterers, and the imitation husbands?

Oh, they are all too busy imitating some one else to stop and go to a funeral. Besides, it is bad for the beauty to cry, and there's a supper on at the new cafe, and really don't you know it's rather a relief to forget.

Doesn't Look Real

Poor, little imitation woman, from the coffin doesn't look real does it? And can it be that those are imitation white roses there at the head of the coffin?

Strut little giggle, poor, poor little imitation humanity, your queer, little, pathetic life, the imitation life of the parks and the theatres and the pretend alley, to some queer end.

Why, the little woman down in the basement of the dry goods store over the janitor's wife knows more about real life in five minutes than you will of your own to be a hundred years old.

She knows sex better, she laughs and cries and sorrows over baby births, and bring children in her own family, and she knows and gets tired and cooks and is cross. What can an imitation woman know of the real girl, Clarence Green ran away to be a cowboy in the west or went to the great factory as an artist on some of the books and died her at home with her head on a clothes basket reading to one who cares, helping with the housework, a success in the family and any other you look at her.

Real sewing and thinking sewed, the real girl, take my word for it.

Beauty Hints.

To the Beauty Editor: Can you tell me of any harmless way to increase the bust? I do not want any more flesh on the rest of my body, but I am so flat-chested I would try anything you thought would give me even two or three inches more development. ANNA H.

The only thing I know of that will enlarge the bust without increasing the size of the hips, or without putting on flesh where not needed, is a preparation put up by The Dr. Kelly Co., especially for small and undeveloped breasts. It is the discovery of a woman physician whose practice was largely among her own sex, and in most cases increases the bust measure four to six inches in a month. Send 10c to the Dr. Kelly Co., Dept. 37 H., Buffalo, N. Y., and they will send you a trial package of the treatment without charge. This is said to be of great value in cases of arrested development of the bust and will give a full, beautiful form without anyone knowing that the treatment was used.

Many mothers have told me that after the baby had been weaned the breasts became flabby and flaccid, but the use of Dr. Kelly's preparation made them full and firm. Do not use pads or bust forms as they never look natural and have a bad effect upon the general health. I believe would recommend ordinary fresh buddies or bones, as they increase the hips and limbs, and with the present styles the form should be slender everywhere except a gracefully developed bust.

To the Beauty Editor:

How can I restore the youthful color and luster of my hair? It is getting dull and streaked and makes me look much older than I am.

Mrs. L. P. W.

Many women ask me for some practical and safe way to restore the color of their hair, and as the reliable answer is to get 50c or $1.00 worth of Queen grey hair restorer from Hoagland & Darling or Jagoon Drug Stores. It is perfectly harmless, restores the natural color with one application, leaves the hair soft and fluffy, and its use cannot be detected.

All That Was Left of St. Croix Johnstone's Wrecked Airship After Fall at Grant Park Meet

Johnstone's machine collapsed in the air during the international aviation meet in Chicago, sending its young aviator to his death in Lake Michigan.

CHICAGO, Aug. 17.—The funeral of St. Croix Johnstone, the aviator who was killed when his machine collapsed in the air Tuesday, and a pall over the International aviation meet here to-day. Hundreds of the men and women who saw him drop into the lake, whose actions closed over him, followed the cortege to the Bowdoin chapel, where simple services were held before entombing the body.

The body of William Badger, the other victim to the hands for air travel, is on its way to Pittsburg, accompanied by Captain Thomas Baldwin, owner of the machine in which he lost his life.

Despite the tragedies, crowds continued to flock to the aviation field in Grant Park, and instead of diminishing their numbers the deaths trifled with the fair spectators, it is confirmed, but it is probable the management will allow all flying for an hour to-day in memory of the dead men. The lake patrol, instituted to guard against accidents similar to those which cost Johnstone and his life, proved its worth yesterday, when a boat picked up Badger from the water after he had fallen seventy-five feet. The first words Stone said when he was picked up were:

"Please! Now I'll be late for dinner."

To-day's program called for two more flights, one for biplanes and the other for monoplanes.

According to the management the meet is not proving a financial success, but as a result a big block of the free seats have been roped off for grandstand, which helps up the deficit.

The meet costs approximately $22,000 a day, and only $11,000 a day is being taken in.

BROKERS SAVE AMSTER STOCKS

Owing to a sharp decline in stocks President N. L. Amster of the Shannon Copper Company, and prominent in financial circles as a mine owner and promoter, has deemed it advisable for Charles Hayden, William A. Paine and George Baldwin to act as a committee in protection of his holdings.

Besides the Shannon property Amster developed the Arizona Commercial and the Boston & Corbin Copper and Silver Mining Companies. He is also president of the Globe Electric Light & Gas Company and a director in the Pond Mountain Water and the Boston & Lowell Companies. He is prominent in club and social circles.

The committee will send to-day a circular of Mr. Amster's personal holdings until there is a great improvement in general market conditions.

"There are said to be personally ten houses carrying small accounts for Amster, and the liabilities range from a few thousand dollars up to $40,000.

"No one knows," Mr. Amster says, "could possibly lose more than $40,000 and that only in the event that my stocks and securities is absolutely worthless. There is no need of any one getting excited and I shall pull out all right in reason and courtesy and consideration are shown."

The brokers interested agreed that in view of the sudden slump in the copper market for Amster's shares a protective committee should be formed to prevent a needless slaughter of his stocks was not attempted.

MAN FINDS SOCIABLE MONKEY IN HIS BED

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—When R. L. Guthrie of Cleveland got into his bed on the ninth floor of the Waldorf-Astoria early to-day he found huddled between the sheets and sleeping soundly a white-faced rhesus tailed monkey. The animal escaped to the ballroom in the commotion that followed. The assistant manager of the hotel investigated and learned that the simian, whose name is Jingali, had been brought to the hotel by two daughters of a prominent naval officer and had been lost in the basement. When told of the escape of her pet, one of the owners expressed the opinion that "the poor dear left the basement because nobody had been down to speak to him."

FINED FOR BEATING DAUGHTER'S FIANCE

HAVERHILL, Aug. 17.—Miss Muriel Durgee, a sixteen-year-old high school student, was one of the causes of a rough and tumble fight between her fiance and her father, Leon Durfee, of Salem street, Bradford. As a result Durfee was fined $15 in the District Court for assault and battery on C. Melville Langley, of Lynn.

The trouble between Durfee and Langley began when the engagement of the couple was announced on August 8. Langley was seen by the girl's father and he told that the social break off the engagement, according to the testimony. Durfee called Langley to the front door of the home of his sweetheart by her father. Langley refused to go. It is said. A few minutes later the two men were in a rough and tumble fight.

GENERAL STRIKE ON IN ENGLAND

LONDON, Aug. 17. The great railroad war is on. An order calling out all the railway employes of the thousands of Great Britain, in numbers between 175,000 and 150,000, making a total of 500,000 men on strike, issued this afternoon after all attempts at peace had failed. Immediately after the national leaders had decided upon a general strike after overtures from Irving George for the appointment of a royal commission to investigate the men's grievances had been turned down, General Secretary Lowth of the Railway Workers' Union sent telegrams to all parts of the united kingdom calling upon the men to strike.

Officials of the Railway Clerks' Union in this city declared that they would present a united front with the railway workers' unions. The railroad men look for the support of the Labor party in Parliament and the step means a gigantic political and industrial war. Great Britain has ever known.

War has been declared and war it will be," was the statement the union made. No another had the strike order been issued than the war office began secretly drilling under way to protect railroad property and help the railroad officials.

A number of railroad employes had gone out earlier in the day, but the strike order is the general result and it was estimated that all railroad traffic became effective 6:00 p.m. 10,000 men were out.

LIVERPOOL, Eng., Aug. 17.—Three British warships were ordered to this port to-day to protect property of the shipping federation along the docks front during the general strike. The first to arrive was a cruiser. She anchored in the Mersey River just off the Princes landing stage. Her searchlight was swung landward so that it can sweep the docks front after nightfall.

The admiralty ordered two other warships to proceed to Liverpool under full steam and take up their stations in the harbor. In a case of necessity armed marines will be landed to patrol the streets along the quays.

The Board of Trade conference with the railroad employes' leaders at London terminated at 4:30 this afternoon with the decision on the national railroad strike still hanging in the balance. Another conference between Premier Asquith, Home Secretary Winston Churchill and representatives of the executive committee of the railroad men was called late this afternoon and resulted in a failure to restore peace. Then came the bayonet order for the calling of authority here. Hooting confirmed with unabated fierceness after an early morning calm. Late in the night up the mobs, destroyed property of still more in no way connected with the strike and in the spirit of wanton vandalism.

Scores Are Wounded.

Leaders of the striking men made the demand to-day that all workmen and wagon in Liverpool go out. The dockers made good growth upon dock property, warehouses and freight sheds along the freight yards. Freight hereof when the peaceful and soldiers attempted to disperse them. Scores were wounded and some of those in the mob were beaten insensible by the police.

Women again took part in the violence and one girl not more than nineteen waved a club about her head and led the charge against the cordon of mounted police who were trying to drive the rioters off.

Much dock property was damaged before the military force succeeded in getting the upper hand of the situation.

Living conditions are becoming intolerable. Famine is approaching. No provisions are arriving and none is being shipped from the slender store on hand to relieve the situation.

BOSTON IS HURT BY THE BIG SHIP STRIKE ABROAD

The big strike among London and Liverpool longshoremen is having its effect on local trade conditions, shipping men say, and unless the congestion in those two ports is relieved within a few days the effect here may be disastrous.

The Cunard liner Franconia, due to leave for Liverpool on Tuesday, has practically been filled up with cargo for the English port, but will not sail to-morrow within a day or two that conditions in England are improved. She will have room to carry 5,000 tons of cargo, including 50,000 bushels of wheat, but is reported refusing to take anything, for fear that she will be unable to leave Liverpool again so as to suffer a loss through delay.

Instead of carrying the big liner will load up with 2,500 tons of coal, carrying it over as ballast. She will then have sufficient coal to carry her over and back again, even though it be found impossible to load up in Liverpool.

The same conditions apply to other lines on that freighters which have no passenger schedules to follow, are nevertheless refusing to take on cargo for English ports, for fear of a tie-up, with consequent loss from delay.

The Franconia starts on her return trip September 9, and her passenger accommodations will be tested to the utmost. Rather than run a chance of immovable, Cunard officials have decided to give up all freight business for this round trip, unless word of the ending of the strike comes from Liverpool at once.

WILBY TO MAKE NEW AUTO LOG

By J. C. KERRISON.

On Thursday, August 31, Thomas Wilby of New York will start on a tour around the United States. Mr. Wilby's object is the preparation of a complete log of the Middle West route from New York to San Francisco. After reaching San Francisco he will lay out and log the route to the Mexican frontier, make the return trip and will be home from his flight through Arizona and New Mexico in Kansas City and St. Louis, Washington, to-day, where he was also recently feted. Mr. Wilby will be accompanied by his

I am pleased to be the local agent of the E. M. F. and Flanders cars and that I have 25% that made such an excellent show at the Automobile Show which will compete in the light car runs at Savannah and Vanderbilt.

"In the meanwhile," say the authorities, "the Flanders is conducting a series of successes in road and hill climbing contests such as this year, having been marked by success not hitherto enjoyed or offered."

The Society of Automobile Engineers is considering the adoption of certain uniform standards recommended to its professional members by a committee of the society. The society is the custodian of the standard screw thread adopted by the Association of Licensed Automobile Manufacturers a few years ago, and is also the custodian of other standards.

Of these one of the less conspicuous was the yoke and the rod end standard, or more popularly the knuckles being forms of brake, carburetor, etc., rods on automobiles. The yoke and rod end supersede this standard, the latter has now assumed the S. A. E. standard for drop forged yoke and eye rod ends. The scope of the standard has been somewhat extended, the general design has been improved and dimensions of the various parts involved have been changed. This is the result of experience and the repeated making of different sets of dies.

Another change in the personnel of the executive staff of the General Motors Company has just been announced. President Thomas Neal, who left last week for a trip abroad, where he has been called on important business in connection with the General Motors Company, sailed, after carrying out a very flattering statement as to the prosperous condition of the company at the present time, announces that in his absence W. C. Read, president of the General Motors Company, and general manager of the Buick Motor Works of Flint, will act as chairman of the president's council, which practically controls the affairs of the General Motors Company. Mr. Mead will thus become an acknowledged factor in the control of the company's affairs, and it is doubtful if a man could be found better suited to efficiently fill this important position.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

STOCK MARKET IS UNSETTLED

NEW YORK, Aug. 17. General liquidation resulted in a decline on the stock market after the opening to-day. Union Pacific selling down one point and Reading declining 1⅜. The tone was nervous and there was some irregularity, as a few issues showed gains in the first sales. After the first few minutes of trading the unsettled condition was accentuated by unexpected lists of selling orders.

Steel common was still under the effect of being sold off 2 points yesterday. This stock opened ⅛ off. Canadian Pacific rallied 1¼ upon strength of a rally in the London market. Amalgamated Copper was the strongest at the opening, while American Smelting was off ¼. Southern Pacific and Southern Railway both registered gains. The former by and after 9:30. Pennsylvania was up ⅝, Baltimore & Ohio off ⅞.

Persistent reports of dividend reductions by Union Pacific and St. Paul were partially responsible for the wide selling movement.

The English stock market was depressed over the labor situation, and this was reflected to a certain extent in to-day's market.

The curb market opened dull, with no changes in either Standard Oil or American Tobacco. Americans and Canadian Pacific were exceptions to the pessimistic tone which prevailed in the London market. Both sustained rallies, while British stocks and bonds were adversely affected by the industrial disputes.

There was a sharp break at Liverpool to-day that caused the New York cotton market to open 2 to 5 points lower. The downward tendency was helped by private reports of rain over the Texas belt. Local bears showed more aggressiveness than they did yesterday. At the end of fifteen minutes the market was from 5 to 10 points below last night's close. Futures and spot were dull in Liverpool.

Opening cotton: Aug., 12.46 offered; Sept., 12.30 offered; Oct., 11.57; Dec., 11.27; Jan., 11.22; March, 11.29; May, 11.19; July, 11.45.

Notes for Investors

There is no use hunting for detailed reasons for the decline in stocks. An exhaustive analysis of the causes of the decline would be merely wasting time, and somewhere and some how, according to the specific latitude possibilities.

$ $ $

If there are any highs in particular now in sight, they are not the cause of the decline in prices, but are themselves due to the same causes that have sent prices down. The unpleasantness in the Balkan States, the threatening war cloud, the differences of opinion as to how to handle the unpleasant situation that is rapidly developing.

$ $ $

The most dangerous feature of the present day is the undue confidence in which the public is that by their continued denunciation of the high cost of living will make it unnecessary to send in more than one to another, etc. etc. etc. Let you are already loved the percentage of three complete sets.

G. F. Worcester, Mass.—Many thanks have been warned not to use any book other than the official American PROVERB BOOK. The price of the American's PROVERB BOOK is 25 cents, and this includes return postage. Exact accurate blank answers are desirable.

A. F. H., Brockton, Mass.—Yes, it is absolutely necessary that every answer blank contain the name and address of a contestant. Follow the printed form closely and remember that the American's PROVERB BOOK is the standard of judgment in this contest. You are at liberty to use the original answers if you choose, but the American's book is the official guide.

C. B. C., Whitinsville, Mass.—The answer blanks printed in the American, July 16th, are all right to use in sending in your answer.

C. H. Worth, Hoosac—Any proverbs found in the official American PROVERB BOOK, which have a slight difference in wording, but to which the meaning is absolutely the same, will be considered alike.

Back numbers of the puzzle pictures—that is, all the pictures that have already appeared in the contest—may be obtained from the American Department, at the regular rates of 10 cents per copy. Back issues of the American, containing the rules of the contest, may be obtained from the Circulation Department at the regular rates of 1 cent per copy daily and 5 cents per copy Sunday.

Lame Logic of the President's Statehood Veto

The President asks Arizona to come into the Union with handcuffs —or else not to come in at all.

As things stand, every State has unquestioned right and power to put the judiciary recall into its constitution. But if Mr. Taft has his way there will be just one State in forty-eight stripped of this right and power. Arizona will stand alone—crippled and disfranchised in this matter, while all the rest of the States are free.

The President's position is therefore untenable. He has no moral right to insist that the elimination of the judiciary recall from the Arizona Constitution shall be mandatory. It was enough that the people of Arizona should be required—as was provided in the vetoed bill—to reconsider and act with deliberation.

Congress should pass the bill over the President's veto—in vindication of the equality of the sisterhood of States.

In his plea for the "independence" of the judiciary Mr. Taft says that "judges are not popular representatives."

The American people want an independent judiciary—and will have it. It is to that very end that they are interested in the recall. Judges must be made independent not only of executive and legislative officers, but also of money and mobs. The only way to secure aloofness from rival powers and corrupting influences is to bring the judiciary closer to that common sense of the people which is the sovereign and sole reliance in this country.

If "judges are not popular representatives," they ought to be. The judges are not a sacred caste, superior to the people, and no good can come of importing the dead language of feudalism into American State papers.

The notion that the people of the United States must be safeguarded against themselves—that they are feverish and mob-like in political action—is a notion of philosophers who live in books and do not use their eyes. The recorded facts of many generations of American history are all against it. The remedy against the occasional foolishness of majorities is not to be found in bureaucratic obstructionism, the rule of red tape or the interminable tenure of questionable office.

The kind of men who aspire to be just judges should embrace the principle of the recall of the judiciary, because it promises to free that kind of judges from evil communications and give them fresh strength.

Americans expect judges to know more about law than majorities do, just as they expect physicians to know more about medicine. An honest judge, with a record behind him, will always be free to decide a legal question differently from what the majority has expected.

The recall will be used, not against judges who enlighten the people, but against those who betray the people.

Was Gambetta a Jew?

We Think He Was. A Reader Says No.

Copyright, 1911, by American Journal-Examiner

On July 14th, the great French national holiday, we named a few of the giants in French history and spoke of Leon Gambetta, the great French Republican, as a Jew. Two or three readers have denied that Gambetta was a Jew, among others Mr. Barrette, whose letter we print:

Editor AMERICAN:

There is a passage in the AMERICAN designating Leon Gambetta as a French Jew, which he was not, although I admit that the notion has been pretty generally cast abroad. Gambetta's pedigree was exactly like my own—he was the child of Italian parents, at least on one side, his father having been a Genoese trader, established at Cahors (Lot), France, where he kept some kind of a store.

Gambetta's father was a strong Catholic, and the immortal utterer of the far-reaching "Le clericalisme, voila l'ennemi," was intended for the priesthood and placed in a seminary. When he left that institution he was one-eyed, as every one knows, and the way he lost that eye is a matter of history. Young Gambetta demonstrated often and strongly against the parental wishes, and threatened to destroy both his eyes if he were not released from the seminary. His father, of course, made light of Leon's expostulations, but took matters rather seriously upon learning that the boy had actually destroyed one of his eyes with the point of a pencil.

Such are the facts. Now the Jewish race is more than averagely endowed with prominent sons and daughters, without having to borrow from elsewhere, and the growing tendency to make a Jew or a Jewess out of any woman or man of mark or distinction smacks too much of ignorance or sycophancy to let it go unchallenged or uncorrected.

LOUIS BARRETTE.

The present writer, who saw Gambetta very often, heard a number of his able speeches and knew some of his friends, has always understood that the great French orator was of the Jewish race, and in Gambetta's lifetime did not hear the contrary.

In any case there is no doubt that, Jew or Gentile, Gambetta was a great citizen—the kind of man that the world needs.

MOVING PICTURES IN SCHOOLS

Editor AMERICAN:

Whereas, children and young people of every age display an avidity for moving picture shows, and,

Whereas, proper exhibitions can be made an inviting, instructive and moralizing factor in the educational problems of the day, and

Whereas, it is desirable to draw the young away from the corrupting influences of some public theatres and substitute with in educational environment such exhibitions as shall be elevating and broadening in character, therefore be it

Resolved, That the matter be considered by educational bodies, and the proper authorities, and as soon as possible put into effect, of establishing places of assemblage in and belonging to all school districts; and a circuit of such moving picture exhibitions as may be approved by parents and guardians and indorsed by teachers and boards of education, under whose authority they shall travel from section to section, disseminating among the pupils knowledge of history, geography, astronomy, natural history, Scripture, music and literature, art and science and the general resources and industries of the world, besides health topics and others too numerous to mention. In short,

Be it resolved, That moving picture shows be established and maintained by boards of education as a part of the curriculum of the schools which they govern.

A WOMAN'S REPLY TO COLONEL GREEN'S CRITICISM OF HER SEX

Editor AMERICAN:

In re Colonel Green's remarks about "women." Every now and then some man hides a scarecrow on a pole and says to women, "Look at yourselves." And woman looks at the object very closely, because she knows that, whatever she is, she is not that.

Someone has said that "people always have just the government they deserve," the women they deserve. We never have been too good for them. We couldn't be too bad and we are just good enough or bad enough (whichever they prefer) for perfect equality.

Why can they not accept that fact and give up lauding us as angels or cursing us as devils.

If all the literature of a certain period should be annihilated except the fault-findings of its men with their women, the savants would still have enough material to tell exactly what the men of that period were like.

No description of Adam's character has come down to us except that furnished by himself in his accusation of Eve, and yet what could be more complete than the picture it supplies us with of a selfish, sulking glutton, packed with the seeds of every vice that has tormented his descendants?

ADMIRAL NOGO, THE GUEST OF THE NATION, HAS VANISHED FROM HIS HOTEL! THE SECRET SERVICE IS AT A LOSS, AND THE GOVERNMENT BEGS YOUR ASSISTANCE!
COME WATSO, OUR COUNTRY CALLS! LET US VISIT THE HOTEL, CAPTAIN POTTS!
THIS ROOM ON THE 15TH FLOOR WAS THE ADMIRAL'S. HE WAS ENTERING THE DOOR WHEN LAST SEEN!
1501
SUCH A NUMBER OF CALLERS MUST PROVE A SOURCE OF GREAT ANNOYANCE IN THE HOTEL
NO DOUBT OUR ORIENTAL GUEST RAN AWAY TO ESCAPE THE NOISE!
HARDLY WATSO,— WITH SO MANY CURIOUS SIGHT SEERS IN THE HOTEL AND OUTSIDE IN THE STREET THE ADMIRAL COULD NOT HAVE ESCAPED DETECTION HAD HE GONE OUT!
SHERRY FOR THE ADMIRAL
FURTHERMORE, ADMIRAL NOGO IS A GUEST OF THE NATION—HE WOULD NEVER DISAPPEAR VOLUNTARILY!
THE ADMIRAL CAME IN; HE DID NOT GO OUT: HE ISN'T HERE! FOR ONCE SHERLOCKO CONFESS YOURSELF BEATEN!
YOU OVERLOOK THE SOLUTION, WATSO— LET US SEE WHO OCCUPIES THIS ADJOINING ROOM!
SO, MR. GROUCHO, 'JUST BECAUSE THE NOISE OF HIS VISITORS DISTURBED YOU THIS IS THE WAY YOU TREAT AN HONORED GUEST OF THE NATION!'
ALL DAY LONG TRAMP! TRAMP! TRAMP! IN THE CORRIDORS! THE ONLY WAY I COULD GET A NAP WAS BY ABDUCTING THE CAUSE OF THE DISTURBANCE!

We Know

By MORTON BIRGE

He strode apace from room to room,
He frothed and choked and wept and cursed.
And cause enough had he for gloom,
His wife got to the paper first.

Ah, well he knew that when his wife
Had finished with the daily sheet,
The paper would be wrecked for life
That he brought home so fresh and neat.

He knew the way that women read—
She snatched the sporting pages out,
And, with a deft, unerring speed,
She strewed those pages roundabout.

Then, having read the bargain sales,
She seized one page, a treasure trove,
And, deaf to husband's horrid wails,
She cast the rest behind the stove.

Now, deep in that one chosen page,
No sound can penetrate her ear,
She's lost to husband's grief and rage
In "Married Life the Second Year."

The husband's case is tough, indeed,
Of all sad things this is the worst,
To bring a paper home to read
And have Friend Wife get to it first.

He Writes About Society Weddings

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

THAT poor Mister Astor is having a awful time getting married, sed Pa. Why doant they let him alone?

I think it is a perfeck shame, sed Ma. Whut if he does want to get married agenn. It seems to me, sed Ma, that the very fack that he wants to git married agenn is sum evidence of his good faith, & thare aint a lot of good faith floating around Newport, so the grocers say.

If I was Mister Astor, sed Pa, I tell you what I wud do. I wud talk my yung lady frend that is to be the bride & I wud go & dig up sum nice Justice of the Peace, or git married by the Mayor, if the Justice didn't have enuff whiskers to walk the ceremoney impressive.

It is a funny thing, sed Pa, that there is such a rush made won a yung helress wants to marry a regular American instead of sum rickety count or spavined duke. I am not saying that I believe in divorce, Pa sed, except sum nites wen you get after me for cumming hoam late from the club, but on the other hand I red git a directtory of European no-lility, sed Pa, & check off a few hundred naims of noble husbands that wud be a lot worse matches for this yung girl than Mister Astor is, & I bet if any one of them skates calm over here for his dot, Pa sed, he wudden't have any trubbel gitting a church marriage.

Well, sed Ma, you doant need to have apoplexy about it. Now that we have settled this little problem, maybe you wuddent have any objeckshun to telling me why you wasent in pure offis this forenoon wen I called you up.

I was thare all the time, sed Pa. Oh no you wasent, sed Ma. Oh, yes I was, sed Pa. Doant fib, sed Ma. I called up the offis ten times at least, & at last the gurl at the fone got vary gay, too, & told me that she wasent any Scotland yard or any Sherlocko the monk. Sum of these days, Ma sed, wen one of them littel squabs gits too fresh down thare I am going to mak a personal call & have it out.

I cant imagine how any of our central gurls wud talk saucy to you, sed Pa. They are all vary nice gurls, & vary pleasant, at leest I have always found them so.

Oh, you have, have you? sed Ma. You dount say so. Then I AM going to cum down town & talk to them & look them over, sed Ma. But you havent told me yet why it is that I cuddent git you on the wire.

I was only out twice, sed Pa. I jest darted out onst to git a cigar, & another time I dashed out to git a seltzer & lemon.

Oh, I see, sed Ma: first you jest darted out & then you jest dashed out. How long did you stay out the time you darted out? The only trubbel with you, my darling husband, sed Ma, is that you always dart out & dash out; but you never dart back or dash back to the offis. Now I want to know whare you was wen you wasent at the offis.

You shuddent ask "you wus" & "you wasent," sed Pa. You shud say "you were & werent." You shud try to be grammatical even in pure rage, Pa sed. This isent Colfax, Wisconsin, Pa sed.

I think you are a wretch, sed Pa. A perfeck wretch.

Jest then Pa showed Ma a hundred dollars that he had collected for a sketch he had note. I had to be away from the offis to collect this munny, sed Pa. Here is half of it for you.

Dearest, sed Ma, after she got the fifty in her hand, if you had lived in the days of nitehood you wud have been a grate nite, my luv.

The Hats of Mrs. Jinks

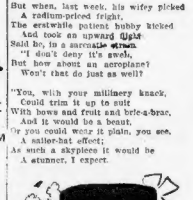
By JAMES RAVENSCROFT

When young Jinks up and spoke his mind,
Said her old grumpy dad:
"Can you support her in the kind
Of hats she always had?"
Jinks with suspense was almost wild,
And quickly answered, "Yes!"
A grouchy smile her old man smiled
And said, "She's yours, I guess."

But ere two wedded years were gone
Young Jinks was quite aware
That he had blindly taken on
A costly load to bear.
For she liked hats 'way up in price
And bought such hats galore;
And when she'd worn them once or twice
She'd go and buy some more.

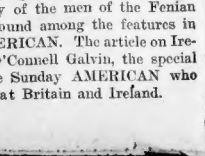
"I think my pay is ample proof
It's more than I can do
To keep above your head a roof
And hats you covet, too.
Expense I have cut and cut;
I never spend a red;
A mortgage on the house I've put
To put hats on your head."

"I don't know what will happen when
My creditors foreclose;
We'll sure be up against it then;
Therefore, I now propose
That you be good and let me take
One of your hats—forsh.
When we are bankrupt it will make
A classy bungalow!"



But when, last week, his wifey picked
A radium-priced freight,
The erstwhile patient hubby bricked
And took an upward flight.
Said he, in a serenade strain:
"I don't deny it's swell,
But how about an aeroplane?
Won't that do just as well?

"You, with your millinery knack,
Could trim it up to suit
With bows and fruit and brie-a-brac,
And it would be a beaut.
Or you could wear it plain, you see,
A sailor-hat effect;
As such a skypiece it would be
A stunner, I expect.



The story of a visit to Glasnevin, where many of Ireland's great are sleeping, and a tribute to the patriotism and bravery of the men of the Fenian movement will be found among the features in next Sunday's AMERICAN. The article on Ireland is by Mr. C. O'Connell Galvin, the special commissioner of the Sunday AMERICAN who recently toured Great Britain and Ireland.
